ONT. SEATBELT LAW

TORONTO (CP) — Mandatory use of seatbelts and reduced highway speed limits, are part of an Ontario government move to reduce traffic accidents.

The seatbelt legislation, introduced in the legislature Tuesday, would apply to all persons except infants, those with certain medical problems and persons whose jobs require them to be in and out of their vehicles often.

It would become effective Jan. 1. Date for the new speed limits would be announced as soon as highway signs could be changed.

Under amendments to the Highway Traffic act, maximum speed on freeways would be reduced to 60 from 70 miles an hour and on other highways to 50 from 60 or 55 miles an hour.

Municipalities would be asked to reduce speeds on sections of highways under their control.

Petition Row Boils In Vancouver CUPW

CLEAN SWEEP of Trans-Canada Highway in Goldstream Park is made by B.C. highways department loader driven by Al Campbell. Construction foreman for district, Hector Gerow, said emergency operation, in which rocks are tumbled from hillside above by rope-joined crew which is touring trouble spots in province, is being carried out for first time in 20 years on Malahat Drive.

HELLYER FOR TORIES?

AMHERST, N.S. (CP) — Paul Hellyer, a former Liberal cabinet minister, says he might contest the leadership of the federal Progressive Conservative party if "sufficient support" is forthcoming.

"Some people in Ottawa, including a number of MPs, have asked me to reconsider but it really depends on the amount of support," Hellyer said in an interview Tuesday.

"If there were substantial support I would be interested because it's an honor that no one can refuse lightly."

$300M Plan For CanCel Expansion

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The Canadian Cellulose Company revealed plans Tuesday for a $300 million, eight-year expansion program to begin early in 1976.

Meanwhile, Resources Minister Bob Williams said Tuesday the provincial government expects to release a feasibility study for a major forest industry development on the central B.C. coast before the Dec. 11 B.C. election.

He said the development is a result of a study by the Vancouver engineering firm of H. A. Simons (International) Ltd. about the prospects for development at Ocean Falls.

He would provide no further details.

The first stage of the CanCel program is the $85 million conversion of a sulphite mill at Prince Rupert to production of bleached kraft pulp. The company's daily kraft production there is expected to rise from 750 tons to 1,250 tons.

The second stage would be construction of a $205 million bleached kraft mill at Castlegar. The new mill's projected capacity of 750 tons a day would increase CanCel's kraft production in the city to 1,340 tons daily.

According to a company statement, the conversion to kraft production followed studies which indicated markets for sulphite pulp would remain depressed indefinitely.

CanCel, bought by the B.C. government three years ago, has shown a steady improvement in its financial status, Williams said.

In the last fiscal year, CanCel recorded a net profit of $55 million despite losses in its sulphite operations.

Williams announced the Ocean Falls feasibility study while addressing the annual convention of the Association of Professional Economists of B.C.

He said the final feasibility study had been completed after intense study of forest resources on the middle coast. He said the development would have a "favorable rate of return."

He said that the Ocean Falls Corp. was operating at break-even point until the industry-wide strike which shut down its newsprint machines.

Williams also announced that Kootenay Forest Products Ltd. at Nelson was starting on a $5 million expansion to improve its sawmill operations, build a pole plant and expand its forest operations. This firm is losing money.

NEWS BRIEFS

No Hope for Franco

MADRID (UPI) — Doctors appeared to give up all hope Wednesday of saving Generalissimo Francisco Franco from month-long multiple heart attacks, internal bleeding and kidney failure. Death seemed imminent.

Tug Sent to Aid

LONDON (UPI) — The British government has sent the fast ocean-going tug Lloydsman to help defend British trawlers from harassment by Icelandic gunboats.

'Super Typhoon'

AGANA, Guam — The Guam warning centre tonight reclassified Typhoon June as a "Super Typhoon" with gusts of up to 220 miles per hour and still intensifying.

Ozone Probe

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — An explorer satellite designed to help scientists determine if aerosol sprays and other pollutants are destroying the atmosphere's protective ozone layer will be launched tonight.

Crash Kills 22

Times News Serives

VANCOUVER — A crack has appeared in the solidarity of striking Vancouver postal workers with the circulation of a petition calling for a secret ballot on the last government offer.

Bert Watch, 54, a sorter at the main post office, said his group hopes to have two booths open today where Canadian Union of Postal Workers members can sign the petition, which also asks for a meeting where union and management officials can give their respective sides on the government offer.

"All we are asking for is a fair shake so the membership can make its own decision," sad Watch.

About 70 persons in the 1,400-local membership have signed the petition so far, he said.

Watch said that according to the union constitution if 51 members say they want a special meeting then the executive has to comply with the request.

Frank Walden, CUPW western regional director, said anybody involved in organizing the petition would be suspended from the union with the right of appeal until the strike is over.

He said the dissidents are just sore losers who have already had their say at a recent Vancouver meeting.

Watch said there are a "considerable number" of workers helping circulate the petitions, but would give no numbers. "We feel there is a growing number here who want to go back to work."

Old age security and federal pension cheques will "definitely" be delivered in the Victoria area Thursday, a post office spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the approximately 50,000 cheques have been sorted by the four Canadian Union of Postal Workers members who broke ranks last week and crossed the picket line to return to work.

The Victoria CUPW local has apparently asked the B.C. Federation of Labor to declare the cheques "hot" because they were not sorted by CUPW members in good standing.

A "hot" declaration could prevent members of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada from delivering the cheques.

An LCUC spokesman said in Vancouver Tuesday that if the cheques are sorted the letter carriers are bound by their contract to deliver them. However, he said, a "hot" declaration could make the union reconsider its opinion.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons once again the government has no intention of increasing its pay offer because it would be contrary to the good of the country.

In other developments:

— The Regina CUPW local is considering laying charges against city police officers because they are getting out of hand in aiding dissident workers to return to their jobs, a union officer said Tuesday.

— Edmonton postal workers are not solidly behind a continued mail strike, says one worker who took an unofficial vote at a union meeting Sunday which showed 43 of the 46 persons voting wanted to return to work.

City Socreds Spurn Pollen Name Bawlf, Rendle to Run

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Mayor Peter Pollen was left out in the cold Tuesday night when Victoria Social Credit members chose Ald. Sam Bawlf and insurance executive Ian Rendle as their candidates in the Dec. 11 election.

Pollen said later he still supports the Socreds and has no plans to seek office in any way in the near future.

Pollen ran a low third in a four-man race which included Ald. Bob Ellis.

Incumbent Socred MLA Newell Morrison bowed out before the balloting starting, telling a surprised audience of nearly 1,000 delegates and observers he is a "very private person" who never sought the publicity of public office.

Morrison made his decision six months ago, wrote his resignation speech last week, and assured the crowd "events of the last few days" had not changed his mind.

Pollen joined the Socreds last Saturday and announced his intention to seek the nomination Monday.

Bawlf joined the party Oct. 2 and announced his candidacy 12 days ago while Rendle and Ellis have belonged to the party for 15 years and nine years respectively.

Tory leader Scott Wallace charged Monday that both Pollen and Bawlf had committed themselves to run as Conservative candidates in Victoria. Pollen agreed he had discussed the matter with Wallace but bowed out, while Bawlf denies the charge as "nonsense."

Pollen's nominating speech was well-received by the jampacked crowd at McPherson Theatre but there was an obvious feeling of discontent among the delegates at the mayor's late entry into the race.

Morrison said he did not want to get involved in any internal hassles over Pollen. But his intent was clear in his resignation speech when he talked at length about his work over the last three years in organizing the party after the debacle of 1972 when his running mate Waldo Skillings was defeated and the party needed to be rebuilt.

"I have always quietly gone about doing my job and have never sought publicity. I do not believe in building my house by destroying my neighbors.

"And I never sold Chevrolets by knocking Fords (Morrison once sold Chevrolets and Pollen owns a Ford dealership)," he said.

"It is not only important to choose a candidate who can get elected, it is more important that he be a credit to this great party. That he believe in our principals. That he be a builder and a supporter."

Some party officials said privately Pollen would probably win the election as a Socred but his toughest battle would be convincing the delegates at the meeting he should get the nomination over the two long-time members and the popular Bawlf who had built up a large following and campaign organization in a short time.

On the first ballot, Bawlf won 206 votes, Rendle 190, Pollen 79 and Ellis 6. With 50

DEPUTY SHERIFF'S JOKE WAS LETHAL

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A jail inmate who died of a drug overdose, and whose death was ruled accidental, was actually killed by a deputy sheriff who spiked the victim's chili with narcotics on a whim to entertain fellow deputies, it was reported today.

The deputy, according to the Plain Dealer, showed some capsules and tablets to two other deputies and said he planned to "have a little fun with one of those critters (inmates)."

The deputy went to where inmates were eating, returned laughing a few minutes later and told the other deputies to "keep your eyes open for some critter escaping to the moon," according to the paper.

The inmate, Jackie Nichols, 26, died a few days later in hospital.

Ostler Quashes Dual Charge

Impaired driving charges against a city motorist were stayed Tuesday in provincial court when Judge William Ostler decided the man had already been penalized for the offence after pleading guilty to driving with blood alcohol over .08 per cent.

"It offends my sense of justice that the Crown would deliberately pursue a charge meant to punish a defendant twice for the same offence," Ostler said.

Heinz Plantz, 41, of 1872 Penshurst, faced the impaired charge after changing his plea to guilty Oct. 8 on the accompanying charge of driving with blood alcohol over .08.

The dual charges also drew sharp criticism from prosecutor Nick Lang, who referred to the procedure as "a stupid directive they've given us from the attorney-general's and you can quote me on that."

Both charges arose from the same incident Feb. 25 following a traffic accident at Pear and Shelbourne, where police apprehended Plantz, who registered a breathalizer reading of .27 blood alcohol content.

Accused parties usually plead guilty to impaired, and have the lesser charge stayed, said Lang, but Plantz and defence counsel Mike Hutchison had hoped the Crown would stay the more serious charge.

Lang was directed to pursue both charges and had already started the impaired driving trial, adjourned from Nov. 6.

But Judge Oslter blocked the Crown move Tuesdy by ordering the impaired charge stayed.

Guarantors Eyed For Gun Buyers

TORONTO (CP) — Purchasers of guns will have to be at least 18 years old and have two persons guarantee their competence to own a weapon under proposals for stiffer gun-control legislation to be laid before the House of Commons.

The Toronto Star says it learned of the proposals from sources in the office of Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

Legislation also would require purchasers of guns to answer a series of questions at special licensing centres intended to verify their purpose of owning a weapon, the paper adds in an Ottawa report.

The law now allows any person 16 or older to own a firearm, providing it is not on the restricted list.

The newspaper says the proposed bill will require persons agreeing to co-sign on behalf of the purchaser to guarantee the mental and physical competence of the buyer.

The bill will apply only to newly-purchased weapons, but licensing of all guns is being considered, the newspaper says.

Allmand said last month that the gun law would require licensing of owners rather than registering of weapons and would cover rifles and shotguns as well as pistols.

A licence would also be required for the purchase of ammunition, he said.

Aussie Letter Bombs

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Letter bombs sent to Australia's caretaker prime minister and another conservative leader today brought violence to the country's political crisis.

Federal police found and defused a letter bomb addressed to Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser in Canberra shortly after a letter bomb addressed to the premier of Queensland state went off in a Brisbane mail room and injured two clerks.

Fraser's political manoeuvring resulted in the unprecedented ouster last week of Labor Leader Gough Whitlam as prime minister, and there was speculaton that the bombs were mailed by an embittered Labor party supporter.

Whitlam condemned the violence, saying:

"Decent Australians will have no part in these methods. They are totally foreign to our way of life."

The Australian Postal Commission offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of those responsible.

"The worst has happened," said an editorial in the Sydney Sun. "Violent words can breed violent actions. The political tough talk has to stop. Now."

Officials said the Brisbane letter bomb was addressed to Premier Johannes Bjelke-Petersen.

The premier was campaigning in northern Queensland.

The explosion prompted an immediate search of other officials' mail. Police searching through the office of the prime minister's departmental staff in Canberra, near Parliament House, found the letter bomb addressed to Fraser.

In another incident Fraser was the target of eggs and meat pies in Darwin on Tuesday as the country's election campaign heated up

None of the missiles hurled by Labor party supporters hit him.

The usually-placid Fraser was visibly angered by chanting Labor demonstrators demanding: "We want Gough."

"If it's Gough you want, take him out to sea and dump him," he replied.

Social Unrest, Collapse of Controls Seen

VANCOUVER (UPI) — There may be massive social unrest as a result of spiralling inflation in 1976, and wage and price controls will probably not last longer than six months, Canadian economists predicted Tuesday.

Labor economist Emil Bjarnason told the economic outlook conference of the B.C. Association of Professional Economists that the blame for current inflation should be laid on war and armaments expenditures since 1939, rather than on labor demands.

"In that period, world powers spent two trillion dollars on war preparations. In these circumstances, who needs a theory to explain inflation?"

Bjarnason, director of the Trade Union Research Bureau, said Canada's income and price controls would not work because governments "are dealing with the symptoms rather than the disease.

"Controls have been tried elsewhere and they have never worked," he said.

"The labor movement is fully justified in the belief that wage controls will be made to work, but prices not at all.

"In all, for 1976, I expect continued inflation, though partially concealed, and massive social unrest. What is going on now is like trying to prevent an explosion by shutting off the safety valve."

University of British Columbia professor Robert Evans, who also addressed the 500 economists, said Canada's wage and price controls would not be effective without a restructuring of the economy to eliminate waste.

He said the Montreal Olympics was an example of a large expense of real resources, without return.

He also cited government spending, waste of hospital facilities and personnel and protracted strikes as factors holding the economy back.

"We can't afford the luxuries of inefficient, wasted resources. Every time you launch an Olympics you have to reduce the after-taxes income of every Canadian.

"The problem now is to see who will take the rap for waste."

Evans said controls probably will be successful over a short term of six months "but I can't see them staying in force (for the full period) except as a general harrassment to the price process."

'Self-Rule' for Scots, Welsh

LONDON (UPI) — The British Government today announced plans for legislation during the present parliament to set up separate local assemblies for Scotland and Wales.

The announcement, made in the Speech from the Throne, followed mounting campaigns by nationalist groups in both countries that want a greater degree of local autonomy or even complete independence.

However, there has been strong hostility to local Scottish and Welsh Parliaments both in the Conservative opposition party and in Prime Minister Harold Wilson's own Labor Party.

Political informants said it is unlikely the legislation will be pushed through and the Scottish and Welsh assemblies set up before 1977 at the earliest.

A Public opinion poll carried out recently showed only 20 per cent of Scots and 10 per cent of Welshmen want complete independence from Britain.

Results of the poll, conducted by the Marplan Organization, were published by the British Broadcasting Corporation in television and radio programs Monday.

DR. LOTTA TO SPEAK

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, will speak on "Caring Means Sharing" at a public meeting to be held in the Women's Institute Room at Colwood Community Hall, Sooke Road, at 2 p.m., Thursday.

Dr. Hitschmanova arrived in Victoria this afternoon and will be staying in the area until Saturday. She is launching the Victoria portion of the annual USC campaign for funds.

Joint Tax Snoops

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada and the United States have agreed to set up a task force to plot a strategy for hunting down multi-national corporations which don't pay their fair share of taxes, Canadian Revenue Minister Bud Cullen said Tuesday.

Cullen told reporters the "task force" will present a report before year end on whether a new agreement between the two countries is needed to prevent corporate tax fraud.

The revenue minister said there is an estimated "tax gap" of $1.6 billion — the amount of taxes owed to the Canadian government each year which is uncollected.

"We have no idea how much of that money might be collected if we have a more stringent tax treaty with the United States," he said.

"That's what the task force is going to find out."

He said there are no figures on what percentage of the $1.6 billion total should be paid by American-based companies.

Cullen said one way to assure collection of unpaid corporate taxes might be "simultaneous tax audits" of corporations in Canada and the United States.

Agreement to set up the task force was reached Tuesday at talks between Cullen and Donald Alexander commissioner of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

Socreds Spurn Pollen For Bawlf and Rendle

per cent of the vote required for election, the last two men were dropped from the ballot and Bawlf and Rendle battled it out on the second ballot with the alderman winning 252 to 234.

The remaining three stayed on in the race to fight for the second spot and Rendle won a majority of votes on the first ballot.

Bawlf, a real estate developer who topped the polls in the last city aldermanic race and has usually been associated with the Liberal party, said he would resign from council if he is elected Dec. 11.

He said he has a good chance of winning and sees his major concern in the election as changing the financial impact the government has on the city of Victoria.

The government does not pay property taxes for its holdings in the city and Bawlf pledged he would fight that system to ensure the province pays full taxes instead of a much smaller grant in lieu.

Rendle, vice-president of Gardner Agencies and an active member of the Baptist Church, gave a strong, fighting speech denouncing the NDP and labelling its government the biggest rip-off of the people.

"When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice but when the wicked are in power the people mourn," he told the meet at one point.

He said if he ran his insurance agency the way the NDP runs ICBC, he would be thrown out of work "and that's what we should do to them on Dec. 11."

Rendle declared his intention to run six months ago and has already made 1,000 house calls.

His support was evident by the large number of styrofoam straw hats and buttons in his favor among the boisterous crowd. Bawlf buttons and literature were also very evident and there was a sprinkling of Pollen badges.

Pollen began his speech with a story about "the good old days" when W. A. C. Bennett asked him to run as a Socred in an Oak Bay byelection. It was tough battle which he lost, said Pollen.

With that obvious reminder of his former association with the Socreds, Pollen then went on to apologize for not doing more for the party since then, adding that he was "rebuilding a city."

The mayor said he was not seeking the nomination out of any ambition or vain glory.

"Who can best represent you?" he asked the delegates ". . . with the greatest of modesty but with the greatest conviction, the man who created one of the finest urban environments in Canada."

Ellis, who has served one year as an alderman, used his alloted speech time to attack the NDP and praise the Socreds' "fight for freedom."

"Never before in our history has the prospect of bankruptcy in our public institutions been more imminent," he said.

The meeting was chaired by former Socred attorney-general Robert Bonner who said it was the last Socred nominating convention in the province.

There were 491 official voting delegates and just as many observers gathered at the theatre to watch the voting and hear the speeches and the now-traditional four-piece band and sing-along.

Pollen said later he still supported the Socreds and has no plans to seek office in any way in the near future.

UFO REPORTS SCATTERED

An Esquimalt woman, a Yukon truck driver and several Kamloops residents have one thing in common — they claim they have spotted unidentified flying objects in the past two days.

Mrs. W. B. White told the Times this morning she saw a "mysterious, huge" object which gave off a "bright, bright" light when she stepped onto the balcony of her apartment at about 10 p.m. Tuesday. The light came from the northeast, approached the Inner Harbor, then abruptly turned around and receeded back in the direction it came from.

She was so transfixed she forgot to call her husband who was sitting in the next room. She watched the light for two to three minutes before it disappeared.

"It didn't make a sound," she said.

Meanwhile Arnold Emslie, 28, of Whitehorse, said he and his partner Richard Ross were carrying a load of lead from Cyprus Anvil mine about 4:15 a.m. Sunday when they saw their object.

They were at Mile 31.5 of the Klondike Highway north of Whitehorse when the object swooped down from the sky and positioned itself about 150 feet above the rear of the trailer.

Mrs. White wasn't able to describe the dimensions of the object she saw but Emslie was. He said it was oblong-shaped and about 300 feet wide.

In Kamloops, Dr. Roland Cobb, instructor of physics and astronomy at Cariboo College, said this morning that he had spoken to persons who had seen a UFO, described as a light which hovered at about 1,000 feet over the pulp mill just west of the city.

A spokesman for the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Victoria said they have received no reports of anything unusual overnight.

Ball-Bearing Bomb Kills Two Diners In London

LONDON (AP) — A bomb packed with ball bearings, nuts and bolts was hurled through the window of an exclusive restaurant crowded with diners in London, killing a man and a woman and injuring 17 others.

Police said the three-pound anti-personnel device was tossed into Walton's restaurant, in the fashionable Chelsea district, from a speeding car Tuesday night. There were about 70 dinners in the restaurant at the time, and there was no warning.

Police issued a city-wide alert today for three men and a woman seen speeding from the restaurant moments after the bomb was thrown.

It was the 14th terrorist bombing in the London area in three months and raised the toll to eight dead and nearly 200 injured. The bombings were blamed on the Irish Republican Army, which has been fighting a guerrilla war to oust Britain from Northern Ireland.

The most recent attacks have all been aimed at the homes and haunts of London's rich and famous. Two other restaurants in Mayfair were among previous targets.

Witnesses told police the bomb landed on a table in the restaurant and began "sizzling" before it exploded.

"I remember looking at the table and seeing red sparks like sparklers," said one of the diners, Ivy Brent. "My girl-friend said, 'My God, it's a bomb.' Then the place was just full of smoke and dark."

"There was a blinding flash, then a big bang and everything went dark," said Maryse Chirent, 23, an assistant manager of the restaurant.

Tories Oppose Curbs

OTTAWA (TNS) — Progressive Conservative MPs are overwhelmingly against the Trudeau government's anti-inflation measure and ready to vote against it on third and final reading in the Commons.

Dissent was raised at their Parliament Hill caucus today.

The arguments for and against the government's controls bill were raised at a meeting held in Regina last weekend.

Opposition leader Robert Stanfield has made it clear that he plans to lead his party in voting against the measure unless the government agrees to mak some major changes in the committee stage.

Three business groups Tuesday, meanwhile, joined the Canadian Labor Congress in citing increased government expenditures as a major contributor to inflation.

The groups appeared before four separate meetings of the Commons finance committee, which is dealing with the legislation to establish selective wage and price controls.

The business groups' however, expressed general support for the program, while the CLC continued to attack the measures.

A spokesman for the Indiependent Business Federation said the government's "incredible bureaucracy and the high-paid civil service" casts doubt on Ottawa's credibility in fighting inflation.

the weather

After a nice bright but cool Tuesday, a slowly deteriorating situation is in sight. An extended frontal system lies off the B.C. coast and has already spread cloud of varying amount over much of the province. The frontal system will move slowly over the province today and Thursday. It will bring mainly cloudy skies to most of the regions along with a few periods of rain on the coast today and some snowshowers in the interior overnight and on Thursday. Cloudy unsettled type of weather is likely to follow in the wake of the system.

Port Alice Move Studied

Times News Services

The provincial resources department is investigating the possibility of moving the slide-plagued town of Port Alice to a different site, a government spokesman said today.

Likely site would be Apple Bay, 20 miles northwest of the present town, and the cost would be at least $10 million, the spokesman said.

Port Alice Mayor George Lacey, after talking to Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer, MLA Karen Sanford and officials of Rayonier Canada on Tuesday, said the government will immediately bring an engineering team in to survey the area and make a decision within three months on whether the town should be relocated.

"We had a much better response from the government today than we had anticipated, said Lacey." "They told us if there is any possibility of making the town safe they will, but they're slanted toward moving it."

Most of the residents have returned to the town following a mud slide earlier this month, the second since 1973. Lacey said Lorimer agreed that the government would foot the bill "for as many trailers as we need" to temporarily house residents.

"It's going to be pretty hard to convince people that this is a safe town to live in," said Lacey. "The streets are in bad shape and the yards and boulevards and houses are all undercut by mud and water."

Meanwhile, highways crews were expected to finish installing a temporary bridge tonight across the Marble River between Port Hardy and Port Alice.

Transport across the river is being carried out by ferries following the washout of the two bridges.

Shady Contractor Reports Sought

The Victoria Better Business Bureau wants homeowners who have had problems with home repair contractors to contact the bureau office.

Bill Tindall of BBB said he has reason to believe there is a group of home repair contractors of dubious character operating in Victoria.

"There have been recent instances where homeowners have paid in advance for work to be done, the work has been started but not completed and the customers are now unable to contact the contractor," Tindall said.

He cited several examples.

An elderly lady, he said, recently authorized a contractor to do an annual check of gutters on her home. She had paid $10 to a different contractor last year and was assured by this year's contractor that the price would be similar.

But on completion of the work, she was presented with a bill for $1,000. The contractor asked her to write a cheque for $500 immediately, which she did.

Another woman paid a contractor $400 in advance to have her kitchen cupboards replaced. The contractor tore up the cupboards. The woman has not seen him since.

Tindall warns homeowners who plan to get some repair work done to firstly get a firm price on the job, then a completion date and finally advance no more than a nominal amount of the contract price before work commences.

Dayliner Kills Woman

A 63-year-old woman was killed Tuesday when struck by a southbound E and N dayliner one mile south of Shawnigan Lake village.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP identified the woman as Jacqueline Stillwell of Shawnigan Lake.

The accident occurred at about 4:20 p.m. on a sharp curve portion of the track a short distance from the playing field at Strathcona Lodge School for Girls.

Alcan Shelves Proposal To Lock Out Kitimat Men

The Aluminum Co. of Canada has agreed to postpone indefinitely its plans to lock out its 1,800 smelter workers in Kitimat.

Labor Minister Bill King called both Alcan and representatives of the Canadian Aluminum, Smelting and Allied Workers Union into his office Tuesday afternoon and the postponement agreement came out of those talks.

King called federal anti-inflation board chairman Jean Luc Pepin during the meeting and received an assurance the board would deal speedily with the union's request for exemption from the federal wage controls.

The union is seeking a $1.70 an hour wage increase over a 20-month contract contends it should be exempt from the wage guidelines because it wants to keep parity with the forest unions and Cominco workers in Trail.

But the company contends there has been no relativity between the unions and thus the contract should not be exempted from the guidelines under the clause which allows for historic parity between unions to be maintained.

Both sides will prepare their submissions to the anti-inflation board within 10 days and expect to have an answer shortly after.

Alcan had threatened to lock out workers after the union rejected the companies' last offer of a 8.9 per cent wage increase this year and 6.5 per cent increase in the second year.

End the Postal Strike

Canada's postal strike enters its 30th day today as a settlement appears even further away despite a seven hour emergency debate in the House of Commons Monday night. What we are witnessing here is a Mexican standoff between the federal government and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers. Cabinet refuses to use its power to legislate striking inside employees back to work for two reasons. First, 1,600 of the strikers have filtered back to work, a process government would like to facilitate. Secondly, forcing postal employees back to work is just what union leaders want. Faced with a back to work order they would have to capitulate. In other words, it would remove responsibility from their shoulders. The leaders would emerge as men who had done their best.

Considering that Canada has suffered three major postal strikes since 1968, it is in government interest to see union leaders discredited. The gentlemen's club that is the House of Commons seems content to allow things to go on as they have until hell freezes over, perhaps next Easter. True, the Conservatives give the appearance of being aroused, but their questions have been soft. Parliament's only dissenter is the NDP which wants to give a new mediator 72 hours to solve the dispute. In the wake of fruitless negotiations to date this is a silly socialist cop out.

So what is to be done? While government and union stare each other down, businesses are going bankrupt and the whole population is seriously inconvenienced. In its attempt to bring the union leadership to heel government seems to have lost sight of its responsibility, namely to provide an efficient postal service across this nation. It is like the inventor who concentrates on fabricating a perfect fire extinguisher while his laboratory burns down around him. Meanwhile, the postal union has established the first strike fund in its history, to show resolve, and indicate it can stand a long strike. The Canadian Labor Congress has backed the postal union calling on the government to return to the bargaining table.

The dispute shows every indication of becoming the longest showdown in Canadian history. Neither side will blink. Clearly the only answer to this impasse is for government to legislate postal employees back to work. No matter that union leaders want this course of action.

Most Canadians want a workable postal system. After the usual rhetoric has been said and done the government should introduce legislation to prevent postal workers from striking again. The mail is an important essential service that should not be ransomed on the whim of union leaders. The cabinet's latest offer would boost inside workers salaries to between $13,000 and $17,000 per annum including average overtime. Even this final offer would require approval from the government's anti inflation board.

Ottawa is so singlemindedly focussed on the postal union it does not seem to see the havoc the strike is causing. And this at a time when the Trudeau administration is piously telling us it is trying to revive the economy. As workers trickle back to work against union orders 136 post offices across the land have resumed operations. Is the public expected to hold its breath for another month in the hope that the entire inside postal work force returns to their jobs, thereby breaking the union? At best slightly more than half the postal workers might return to their jobs. At present, the Trudeau administration looks unhinged, as it allows breaking one union to take precedence over governing the country efficiently.

" . . . except I'd like the alfalfa cakes instead of the green bean meal and I'll have the kelp chips rather than the mashed soya bean sprouts . . . "

Arbitrary and Unfair

The provincial government seems to have a curious policy on the matter of strikes which affect its own operations. Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall says the government doesn't get involved in labor disputes.

So it refused to place voter registration advertisements in the Kelowna Courier, a Thomson newspaper whose compositors and pressmen have been on strike for several months but which is still publishing with non-union labor. Three other Thomson newspapers, in Kamloops, Nanaimo and Penticton, are in the same situation, but they did receive the government's ads. None of the four, however, got the recent consumer services department ads which outlined procedures for complaints on breaches of the food price freeze.

The Courier has gotten no government advertising at all since it resumed publication. Does the fact that it is the daily newspaper in Bill Bennett's hometown (while Kamloops and Nanaimo are NDP-held ridings) have something to do with the lopsided policy? According to the Courier's city editor, NDP officials in Kelowna also refuse to talk to his reporters about election matters — an even more bizarre situation in which the party is only defeating itself.

Then there is the government's patchwork quilted policy on the postal strike, with Hall affirming that the government refuses to patronize "rent-a-scab" services which sprang up after the letter sorters struck and shut down the Canadian postal system. Government departments will take mail in person from individuals to be forwarded to other branches of the government in the province.

But existing courier systems, bus lines, air freight and others, may be used to circumvent the strike. But land registrars in some B.C. cities, who are provincial government employees, said they would refuse to accept mail from any courier, although the Vancouver land registry office stated that although courier deliveries wouldn't be accepted, almost anybody could be considered an agent of an individual and not a courier.

In its desire to be scrupulously fair, the government is ending up simply acting in an arbitrary way. Does anyone seriously believe that if the government accepts mail from newly-created courier services, the Canadian post office is going to fold up and go out of business, or the CUPW collapse?

And what if the postal strike goes on until Easter next year, as Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey seems to think? Will the government just go into hibernation, not accepting sales tax receipts and other accounts receivable unless delivered in person to a government office or by an approved courier service?

In its attempts to walk a virginal pure line on such a complicated matter — for example, if we all observed the B.C. Federation of Labor's "hot" list, half of B.C. would starve or go dry—the B.C. government comes off as a confused and partisan administration. It's a government of all the people, not just the postal workers or others on strike.

JAMES RESTON

'Old Geezers in Their 60s'

DALLAS — The more you look at the men who are now running for president, the more you have to wonder about the men who are not running.

It is a long and even formidable list: Senators Hubert Humphrey and Fritz Mondale of Minnesota; Senators Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Ed Muskie of Maine, and Mac Mathias of Maryland; Governors Jerry Brown of California and Ruben Askew of Florida; former Governors Connally of Texas and Reagan of California; and finally, among others, Elliot Richardson of Massachusetts, the greatest cabinet-maker since Chippendale.

These men are at least as impressive as the declared candidates, which is modest praise, but still you have to think that there must be something wrong if the list of non-candidates is better than the list of candidates, and the people do nothing about it.

Where Are Young?

By the logic of life, the young men and women in their forties or even in their thirties should now be coming to the forefront of the presidential race. The majority of our people are now under forty and the central questions of the last years of the 1970s are wholly new and are not likely to be resolved by the Hooverish conservatism or New Dealish innovation of the past.

But by the accidents of life, the natural American preference for picking leaders when they're coming instead of when they're going somehow seems to have got lost. After Eisenhowever, the Democrats gambled on young Jack Kennedy, almost against their will. But when he was murdered, they went back to Johnson, and both parties have been stuck with old geezers in their 60s ever since.

It can scarcely be argued that these senior citizens have such a brilliant record from the past, or such clear visions and answers for the future that they deserve another chance.

Humphrey clearly fought his way to the leadership of his party, and at least he has the good judgment not to fight for the nomination, which he knows should go to a younger man. President Ford is the last of the Nixon accidents in one of the most forgettable eras in American history.

Both parties have to share the blame for these dreary years. Though the defence budget went as high as nine per cent of the GNP in recent years, we stumbled into an unnecessary Vietnam war and lost it. Though social welfare spending went from $24 billion in 1950 to $242 billion in 1974, the welfare muddle is still a national disgrace.

Though the U.S. is beginning to come out of the worst economic slump since the 1930s, October unemployment was up more than 200,000 to over eight million or 8.6 per cent of the work force — the biggest rise since the May 1975 high of 9.2 per cent.

In the midst of all this, it scarcely seems reasonable for the parties to offer to the nation these men from another time. While it is true that we now have no Jeffersons, Andrew Jacksons, Monroes or Lincolns on the scene, the present list of candidates is not that bad, and is probably as good or even better than the Wilkies, Deweys, Trumans, Goldwaters, Nixons and McGoverns when they were nominated.

The outlook for picking the right man out of the runners and non-runners, however is fairly bleak when you look at the thirty-odd primary elections some of them will go through and some of them won't. It is almost enough to make you consider the heretical idea that with all these state presidential primary elections, maybe democracy has got out of hand. Or even worse, to whisper a good word for that most criticized and condemned institution of American politics — "the smoke-filled room." The notions that the people, in primary elections, are better qualified to pick a national leader than the party leaders, who know both the runners and the non-runners, is a distinctly American idea.

It sounds more democratic, and in many ways it probably is. But for example, the British, who know something about democracy, see no conflict between democracy and party responsibility for picking the best man they have, running or not. They leave the final choice to the people, but not the preliminary decision about which candidates are to be considered and which ignored.

Amercan Dissatisfied

In the last few days, after meeting with editors in Acapulco, bankers in Columbus, Ohio, and voters here and elsewhere in between, one finds it hard to avoid the undemocratic conclusion that the American people are both dissatisfied with the candidates they think they're going to get next year, and feeling helpless to do anything about it.

So the prospect is for an exhausting primary season leading in the end to a race between two leaders of the last generation. Unless, of course, the people begin to organize now, state by state, for a protest vote on behalf of younger men.

This can be done only by a write-in campaign of massive proportions in all the primary states. No such demonstration of public protest has ever been launched nationwide before, but maybe the time has come for the people to start demonstrating for the men of the future.

After the primaries, you can be sure they will be griping, but by then it will be too late.

Working Pairs

Inflation, whom do we charge? Easy, I say, the charge is plain and simple to understand. Unions contribute 15 per cent to the problems by allowing a few elite groups of trades to rise to unheard of wage scales while ignoring other lower paid unionists who find it impossible to purchase big brother's work. Business people I assess at 15 per cent because of their greedy profit ratio. Thirdly, and at 70 percent of the problem are the working pairs within a family. With both husband and wife working all those nice items are easily obtained such as new cars, boats, trailers, house furnishings and last but not least trips throughout the world.

How the working pairs devote time to their children and social structure of same leaves many questions unanswered. However, one might look at the divorce courts and severed families of same to find an answer.

Is it therefore any wonder why we are paying more and wanting more, and that, dear readers, is just where it's at. — Dave S. Preston, 2857 Wyndeatt Avenue.

Short Term Gain

The present B.C. government's policy toward apartment owners is totally inadequate and unfair. All apartments except new ones are controlled.

What if they put controls on all existing bakeries or gas stations? Then when heading for a disastrous shortage, lifted controls on all newly-built bakeries or service stations, but kept them on the rest. Would that make sense or would it be fair? Yet, this discrimination is practised toward owners of older apartments.

How can a government which brags about being fair and humanistic suppress one segment of society? A large percentage of voters do live in apartments. But is it right to acquire votes that way? It is done to the glory of the poor old pensioner. Only the single pensioner is suffering, as he only receives half of a couple's income and rent is the same for one as for two. But the assistance should come from profits and high wages. Why should I keep the rent of 30 apartments low when I only have two pensioners? Most of the others had wage increases of 17-27 per cent.

My second mortgage at 10 per cent is now due. The new rate is 15 per cent. This constitutes a 50 per cent increase or $2,000 next year which has to be paid by me as the 8 per cent rent increase cannot cover that too. To replace a first mortgage at 9 per cent with today's rate of 12 per cent equals a 33 1-3 per cent increase. Depending upon the size of the mortgage, an increase from 15-25 per cent on rents would be necessary to offset that alone.

Hydro increased twice in one year, totalling 30 per cent. Gas increased 50 per cent. Fuel oil increased also. Tenants who are supplied with heat should pay an extra two per cent.

I lost money last year. In all fairness I should at least make a mini-income, as I do all repairs and caretaking myself. Last year I sold a house to keep the apartment going. This year I cashed my pension. Yet, being an apartment owner I live under the stigma of being a gorging unscrupulous landlord.

David Barrett gave himself huge increases. His income is more than most high-rise owners. However, he continually puts forth a picture of a modern day Robin Hood who is also fair to everybody. Why can't he understand that high interest is a "villain" which should be compensated for?

This attitude and policy toward used apartment owners is not socialistic but communistic. (I am a socialist myself.) Quebec's rent controls are adjustable to landlord's expenses. Instead of criticizing Quebec, we should learn from them on this point.

Although there have been short-term gains to tenants by imposing controls, the end result will be a serious disaster to all. People will be unable to move to other parts of B.C. for fear of not finding suitable accommodation. Houses will continually be out of reach for the lower income group as the shortage produces higher prices.

Then I wonder if Dave will still be grinning. But I must credit him with the knowledge that a quick election is in his best interest. — John G. Jorgensen, 3417 Seymour Street.

Victoria apartment building owners being squeezed by rising expenses

Election Buying

I should like to say amen to the statement by Gordon Gibson that the Socreds are trying to buy this election by spending money as if it was no concern.

The Socreds talked of spending some $700,000 on the election although they admitted that their war chest was far below that figure. Of course the other parties do not have that sort of money and the NDP has stated frankly that their budget is $350,000 at the most. We will never find out what the Socreds actually spend but as they are supported by the monied interests, money is no problem. They are certainly not running this election on the dues of $1.25 per year from their membership.

It is also of interest to look at some of their candidates who, of course, fit in very aptly into the "peoples party." Carson in Oak Bay, businessman; Morrison in Victoria, businessman; Pat McGeer, Garde Gardom, Point Grey, both these men are well-heeled; Bill Bennett, South Okanagan, millionaire businessman; Peter Hyndman, president of Socreds, well-heeled citizen; Allan Williams, West Van., very successful lawyer; Bob Bonner, in charge of their policy committee, ex-vice-president of MacMillan Bloedel.

Are these the men who know the problems of such a large section of our society who are just trying to make ends meet? However the apathy, selfishness and ignorance of the average voter is a great asset for the Socreds.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Union Questions

On a recent television news broadcast, I witnessed a rare act of courage. A young man bold enough to charge his way through a wall of picketers after tearing up his union card in defiance of those who tried to exert their will on him. Here was a young man with guts, who wanted to work and was not brainwashed by his so-called leaders.

I sincerely hope this portends a trend that more rank and file workers are starting to think for themselves and refuse to be sold a bill of goods by their hierarchy who purportedly are representing the rank and file workers.

Before a strike vote, let the union man ask himself these questions:

Do these union leaders have to go without their pay cheques during a strike? Do I really want my family to suffer the consequent hardship of a strike? How much pay do I lose during any protracted strike? How long do I have to work to make up for this pay loss and when that time has elapsed will it be time for another strike?

Do these union leaders work for me or are they governed by their superiors with ulterior and selfish motives? What happens to all the union dues and do I get a true financial picture from union financial statements? Ask yourself if any union leader has explained the fact that a healthy economy, business and corporate profits automatically lead to expansion, more jobs and less unemployment?

It is sickening to see and hear and read Joe Davidson, Len Guy and their ilk spouting irrational and vitriolic outbursts in the news media about profits, big business, etc. etc. — J. Eugene Philion, 1233 Fairfield Road.

From the Times of November 19, 1915

NEW YORK — "The colonel has no statement to make," Col. Teddy Roosevelt's secretary said today concerning a report from Ottawa that the colonel had offered to join Canadian field forces at the front in France. The Ottawa correspondent of the Winnipeg Free Press reported that "there is a possibility that ex-president Theodore Roosevelt may put into practical effect his public and vigorous espousal of the cause of the allies by personally leading the way and volunteering for active service with the Canadian forces."

Controls Coming Whatever Unions Do

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — Who's to blame for the confrontation between the government and the labor movement over income and price controls?

Prime Misister Pierre Trudeau is being criticized because it is said he has been abrasive in private meetings with labor leaders when he should have been persuasive, and threatening in public when conciliation was called for.

Perhaps so. Tact is not his strong suit. But even if he had cooed like a dove, the unions would still have refused to co-operate on controls.

The record makes clear that the unions object to controls in principle, and not just to the latest plan put before them by the government.

John Young, then-chairman of the Prices and Incomes Commission, asked the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) to approve a program of wage restraint in 1969. The CLC leader refused.

After getting business leaders to accept a program of profit restraint in 1970, Young went back to the CLC. Again he was refused.

When Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield advocated last year a 90-day freeze on incomes and prices, to be followed by a period of flexible controls, union leaders and their political agent, the New Democratic Party, were among his severest critics. They wanted no part of controls in any form.

When president Joe Morris presented the CLC's annual brief to the federal cabinet early this year, he seemed to suggest in a dialogue with Trudeau that the unions might be prepared to co-operate with the government in fighting inflation. But when reporters swarmed around afterwards to ask if this meant the CLC was changing its position, Morris replied sharply that he had been misunderstood and that the unions had no intention of accepting controls.

Subsequently, Trudeau, Labor Minister John Munro and John Turner, then finance minister, had private talks with the labor leaders to ask them to accept voluntary guidelines. Again the unions refused.

The unions are now concentrating on the criticism that the government's new program is unfair. They say it will control wages, but not prices, and this is true for the simple reason that prices are beyond complete control.

We can't for example, control the prices of goods and services we import from abroad. There are already cost increases built into production in Canada which are bound to result in price increases. Farm prices are excluded from control because the government thinks, rightly or wrongly, this will encourage food production and eventually bring down prices to the consumers.

What the government does promise to do, however, is to control profits. In fact, while wages and other types of income are to be allowed to increase by up to 12 per cent, or even more in the case of the lowest paid, dividends and profit margins are frozen.

On the face of it, therefore, business is being treated much more severely than labor. The real question is whether the controls on profits will work. The unions say there are loopholes through which company accountants and lawyers will wriggle with ease: the government insists it will make the controls stick.

The struggle with the government will be long and bitter. The unions may even win the first rounds because it is apparent that Trudeau and his colleagues have rushed into the program of controls with little preparation and not much experience to guide them.

By refusing to co-operate in the experiment, the unions may be able to cause so much confusion that the program is discredited and controls are abandoned. They may even be able to discredit the present government and prepare it for defeat at the polls.

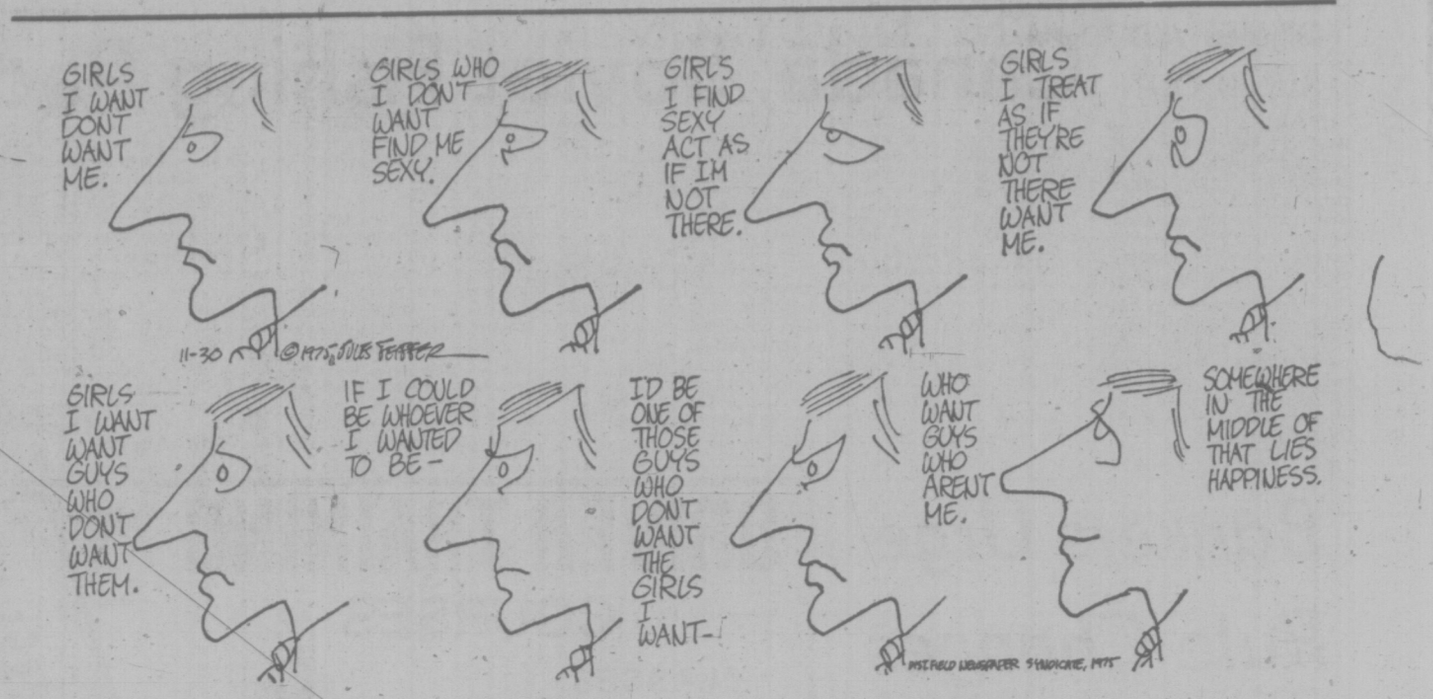
But such triumphs would be short-lived. We appear to be in an historic process of transfering economic power from the private interest in the market to the public power of government. Income controls are one development in this process. Others are the increasing willingness of governments of all political stripes to control corporations, and the rising share of wealth which is distributed through government.

With the decline of the free market, there must come a decline of union power. If labor leaders defeat this set of controls, they will soon face another.

Even if they overturn this government and elect one to their liking, they will find it is subject to the same imperatives as the Trudeau government.

The Trade Union Congress helped to defeat a Conservative government in Britain on the issue of controls, only to to find the Labor government asking for wage restraint.



World's Mothers Turning to Bottle

By NICHOLAS WADE
Science

Changes in national diet, George Orwell once suggested, are probably more important events in a country's history than changes of dynasty or religion. Orwell might have regarded as particularly significant a change in diet which also represents a deep-rooted shift in social mores — the substitution in infant feeding of the bottle for the human breast.

Back to Breast

In the United States, the breast has been gradually transmogrified from its nutritional role into a cosmetic and sexual symbol so potent that an American woman may no longer nurse her baby in public. The trend is beginning to reverse; over the last decade there has been a grassroots movement to resume breast-feeding, a back-to-nature reaction against the unwarranted intrusion of technology into an intimate aspect of family life.

Ironically, just when American mothers are putting babies back to the nipple, women in underdeveloped countries are imitating in droves the Western fad for the bottle.

The flight from nipple to nozzle may be relatively harmless for American babies. For developing countries, the practice presents some highly insidious aspects.

Early abandonment of breast-feeding, especially in poor families, "can be disastrous to infants", warns the Protein Advisory Group of the United Nations. Only in the last two years or so have nutritionists begun to appreciate the full extent of the damage, and their concern has yet to be translated into substantial improvement of the situation.

Human milk, strange to say, is the ideal food for human infants. It usually fulfils all the child's nutritional needs for the first four to six months of life, and up to three-quarters from the sixth to the twelfth month or beyond.

Cow's Milk Dear

It is, moreover, hygienic and cheap. Under the conditions common in third world countries, cow's milk is neither. A laborer in Uganda, say, may need to spend a third of his daily wage to buy milk for his baby (in Chile, 20 per cent; in Tanzania, 50 per cent). The packaged dried milk formulas are even more expensive.

As breast-feeding has passed out of vogue in the last two decades, severe forms of malnutrition have started to appear in babies at a younger age—at an average age of eight months instead of 18—a trend which is especially ominous because of the importance of good nutrition at this age for brain development.

The breast being so much better than the bottle, why do mothers in developing countries have any truck with cow's milk? The flight from the breast is largely an urban phenomenon. There is a strong tendency in towns for women to follow the example of a small, Westernized elite. They bottle-feed not because they have to go to work—in Latin America less than one woman in four of childbearing age holds a job—but because the bottle has become a status symbol.

The continuing momentum of this trend owes much to the commercial activities of the baby food industry, together with the failure of pediatricians to put up any determined resistance.

A leading critic of bottle-feeding in third world countries is Derrick B. Jelliffe, professor of pediatrics and public health at the University of California, Los Angeles. Accusing the companies of fostering "commersiogenic malnutrition," Jelliffe suggests it is time to reconsider their benign self-image.

The pediatric nutritionist in developing countries, he writes, "is left increasingly frustrated by the well-financed, steamroller marketing techniques of the food industry to sell totally unaffordable and inappropriate infant foods in impoverished communities, while mouthing sanctimonious platitudes about their world role in improving child nutrition."

Most companies do not overtly claim that bottle-feeding is better than breast-feeding. (An exception is an Indian company whose copy line urges that its baby food be used "as a substitute for breast milk . . . right from the first week.") An advertisement showing an upper class mother, a healthy baby, and the product name probably makes any explicit claim of superiority unnecessary.

Selling Pitch

What seems more than likely to make some mothers give up breast-feeding far earlier than desirable is the companies' practice of having saleswomen approach mothers right after birth to push their product. According to P. S. Venkatachalam, of the Protein Advisory Group, some companies hire nurses, dress them in uniforms similar to those worn in hospitals, and send them to visit mothers in the maternity ward and, later, in their homes.

Yet the bottle, wherever it usurps the breast, is a Western export that Third World countries could do well without. Re-education of pediatricians and regulation of the more pernicious promotional activities of the baby food industry would seem to be obvious steps to take.

THE PRESIDENT WHO'D RATHER BE A CANDIDATE

NEW YORK TIMES
An Editorial

The presidency itself is the greatest political asset that any White House incumbent can possess as he enters a political campaign. The office automatically confers historic prestige and an air of authority; it makes him privy to diplomatic and military secrets that his outside rivals may not know; it enables him to generate news and command public attention to an extent that every other politician can only envy.

It is President Ford's curious political feat that he has managed to squander most of the advantages of his office and make himself seem like any other career candidates for his own job. Increasingly, the public perceives that it has in the White House a mere political candidate for the presidency when it would like to have a president.

The political and administrative upheaval the other day provides the latest example of Mr. Ford's propensity for unpresidential behavior. He fired two nonpolitical officials — Secretary of Defense Jams R. Schlesinger and Central Intelligence Director Willliam Colby — from major posts that traditionally have been kept insulated from normal partisan politics. Choosing his own senior advisers is a president's prerogative; but when such changes are made, the public is entitled to an explanation. Mr. Ford offered none except that he wanted his own team — "my guys" — in those jobs.

Such an explanation might have sufficed if the new team members had been figures whose qualifications for these difficult jobs were self-evident. Instead, he appointed two former Republican colleagues from the House of Representatives, Donald Rumsfeld and George Bush. Both are politically ambitious, and President Ford at his subsequent news conference specifically held out the hope that either of them might be chosen as his vice-presidential running mate next year.

FORD

Thus, instead of appearing before the country as a chief executive preoccupied with substantive problems of diplomacy and defense, Mr. Ford has invited the grave charge that he is politicizing two of the most sensitive national security posts at his command.

He further underscored this impression by his decision to couple the dismissal of Mr. Schlesinger with the removal of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger from his second job as National Security Adviser to the president. Since Mr. Schlesinger was popular with conservatives of both parties on Capitol Hill because of his doubts about detente and his staunch defense of a large military budget, the president decided to conciliate these conservatives by diminishing Mr. Kissinger's area of authority, in form if not in reality.

Paralleling these shifts in defense, intelligence, and foreign affairs was the quite separate but almost overshadowing event of Vice-president Nelson A. Rockefeller's withdrawal as the president's prospective running mate. Only a year ago, Mr. Ford put forward Mr. Rockefeller as the man best qualfied to succeed him to the presidency. Although Mr. Rockefeller is as capable as he ever was, the president now drops him in order that the vice-presidency, too, can be dangled before other aspirants and used for whatever transient political advantage it may offer.

The effect of all this is to show the public the reality of a chief executive who is not preoccupied with the tasks of government but instead is distracted by the risks and opportunities of an election that is still a whole year away. His conventional politicking at the banquet circuit and the party rally, acceptable at certain times and in certain circumstances, is irrelevant to the public's deepest concerns. Those concerns are inflation, unemployment, the disabling anxieties about the future that those two economc evils inevitably evoke, and the exceedingly delicate relationships between the nuclear superpowers.

What the country would like to have is a president who thinks about major policy questions, who formulates consistent domestic and foreign policies and who seems to know where he and his administration are going. Mr. Ford is in deep political trouble because he thus far fails to satisfy these expectations of the presidency. In fact, he gives every appearance of having effectively abdicated the presidency today in favor of his candidacy for the nomnation next year.

Who Will Be Left to Fight?

By JOANNE OMANG

BUENOS AIRES — When Argentine Congressman Jesus Porto offers a ride home, it is an act of courage to accept.

Smiling, a hefty young assistant precedes Porto to his nondescript car, which has no license plates. The assistant looks under it and feels carefully behind each wheel. He looks under the hood and into the trunk. He gets in and starts the car, and when it is running, Porto, chatting amiably with his guest, gets in front and the assistant climbs into the back.

The young man pulls a long, flat cardboard box marked "flowers" from under the back seat and withdraws an automatic rifle. This he holds at the ready, muzzle just below the window rim, as Porto drives through the busy city traffic. Porto's jacket is open, revealing the shoulder holster and pistol he carries on one side and the can of Mace on the other.

Jesus Porto, a small balding man with sad, circled eyes, filed the first congressional demand for an investigation into the financial dealings of Jose Lopez Rega, the mysterious former minister of social welfare. Lopez Rega was ousted in July as adviser and confidant to President Isabel Peron under charges he headed a rightist death squad, the Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance.

Porto is only one of hundreds of persons who have been subjected to anonymous death threats, kidnap attempts and violent attacks in the ongoing political violence which has taken 650 lives in Argentina this year, more than two a day. When a passing car rakes another one with machine-gun bullets, killing the occupants, the news is reported in the daily "violence" or "terrorism" sections of the city newspapers.

When seven men in business suits burst into the house of lawyer Jose Iturraspe in the industrial city of Rosario, he wasn't home.

They made it clear to his family that the young labor union lawyer would have been kidnapped if he had been there. Iturraspe, 36, and his wife Pia, 25, also an attorney, haven't been back to that house since. "I was defending a lot of workers who were arrested on charges of being (leftist) agitators," he said in a Buenos Aires interview.

"I knew it was dangerous, yes. But it was a sort of occupational hazard." He and his wife, who is six months pregnant, are moving to Peru since there is nowhere in Argentina that they feel safe.

The violence is not confined to prominent figures, nor is either the left or the right exclusively responsible. Policemen have probably suffered the most from the kidnappings and shootings.

In the provincial capital of Santa Fe, citizens were warned not to touch 100-peso notes, worth about a dollar, that they might see lying on the sidewalks. The government communique said leftist terrorists had turned them into booby traps by means of a thread running to explosives hidden nearby.

In an unprecedented announcement, the Olmos textile plant said in a recent advertisement that it was forced to close down because of industrial sabotage and violence. The firm said it had suffered seven bombings, one official murdered and another kidnapped, plus unexplained walkouts, slowdowns and uncounted threats of more bombings, kidnappings and death.

"There's not a foreign firm here that doesn't know exactly how much it would cost to move out of the country completely, including lawsuits and broken contracts," said a banking industry source. Most executives already live in neighboring Uruguay, commute in by plane, stay in different hotels each week and go home only on weekends.

"If things don't get better soon there won't be anyone left to fight with each other," said a graying economist. He had a pistol on the floor between the front seats of his car.

GAMES AID RULED OUT

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Tuesday the federal government is in constant communication with Montreal and Quebec authorities on the Olympic Games but has no intention of supplying direct financing to the Games.

He was replying in the Commons to Claude Wagner (PC — St. Hyacinthe) who asked whether the government has been in touch with the Quebec government which recently took over control of Games construction.

Canada, Soviet Fishing Pact Near

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Canada is preparing to negotiate a treaty with the Soviet Union that would include Russian recognition of a future Canadian fishing limit of 200 miles or more, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Tuesday.

LeBlanc told a news conference that Norway and Canada are about to sign a similar treaty and talks with Poland, Spain and Portugal will be held soon.

The treaties are in preparation for the time when Canada will achieve management control of all fish stocks on the continental shelves of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

Separate agreements with the United States also will be sought.

LeBlanc reiterated the federal government's view that Canada should obtain a fishing limit of 200 miles at the United Nations Law of the Sea conference, which resumes in New York March 15 and ends May 7.

LeBlanc and L. J. Legault, Canada's chief negotiator on fisheries at the Law of the Sea conference, also emphasized that legislation passed in 1971 gives the federal government authority to unilaterally declare a 200-mile limit through an order-in-council preceded by 60 days' notice.

LeBlanc said Canada will not wait forever for the conference to produce a global treaty for the use and protection of the oceans, and a unilateral declaration will remain one of Canada's options.

The minister, who arrived in Newfoundland Sunday and left Tuesday for Halifax, declined to say how long he thought Canada should wait.

The last conference ended in Geneva May 10 without producing a worldwide treaty, but a unified negotiating text was prepared for discussion at the New York gathering. The text includes most of the points that Canada is seeking, including control of marine life within 200 miles.

Legault said Canadian and Soviet represenatives will meet in February to begin work on the proposed bilateral treaty. Canada and the Soviet Union agreed at a meeting of the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries (ICNAF) at Montreal in August to begin talks on the treaty.

He said the treaty proposed by Canada contains provisions that the Soviet Union recognize a Canadian fishing limit of undeterminated size.

Bankers Urge Rule Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — Financial institutions such as trust companies should not be allowed to continue to invade the banking field unless they are subject to the same costly regulation as banks, the chartered banks said Tuesday.

The Canadian Bankers' Association said in a brief that it welcomes competition as long as there are common rules for all those in the field, including trust companies, credit unions and caisses populariares.

The association says much of the business conducted by such institutions are banking functions — taking deposits and issuing cheques — and they should be required to place some of their deposits as reserves with the Bank of Canada if they wish to continue.

The brief was previously submitted to the government, which is preparing for the once-a-decade revision of the Bank Act.

Foreign banks and financial institutions should be a priority for inclusion under common federal regulations because there are about 170 such companies, with assets of $1.8 billion, now operating in Canada "completely free of any control or supervision by the federal monetary authorities," the association said.

The companies usually are subsidiaries of powerful foreign banks which, under provincial regulation, are borrowing money on the open market and lending it to businesses.

The association wants parent companies to register here as banks — as some other countries do with foreign banks — and be allowed to carry out full banking functions, including taking deposits.

However, the foreign banks should be subject to limitations.

The association said the growing financial power of such institutions "operating outside the direct influence of the Bank of Canada will in time weaken the impact of monetary policy."

A spokesman for the association said trust companies, credit unions and mortgage loan companies now hold about one-third of Canadian dollar assets held by all financial institutions — compared with only 10 per cent 30 years ago — and this is outside the central bank's control.

ABORTION PETITION

OTTAWA (CP) — A 5,500-signature petition calling for removal of abortion from the Criminal Code and the immediate liberation of convicted abortionist Dr. Henry Morgenthaler was presented Tuesday in the Commons.

The petition from Le Reseau d'Action et d'Information pour la Femme, a Quebec-based women's group, also calls for establishment of medical clinics "where the interruption of pregnancy can be practised in complete safety and in a healthy atmosphere."

Annuities Interest Boost Seen

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation to raise interest paid on government annuities, one of the oldest forms of income support for retired persons, Tuesday won approval in principle in the Commons.

The interest rate is being increased to seven per cent from the present three to 5¼ per cent to bring it more into line with rates of return paid in the private sector, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said at the opening of debate.

The bill would also eliminate the present $1,200 annual ceiling on payments to annuity holders. Average payment now is $600 a year.

Persons holding annuities with interest rates of three per cent will see their payments increase by 32 per cent. Those with 5¼ per cent contracts will get payment increases of 10 per cent.

Most contracts now have a four-per-cent interest rate and holders will get a 22-per-cent raise in payments, which are to be made retroactive to last April 1.

The change will cost $38 million in the fiscal year 1975-76.

Noose Row After Christmas

OTTAWA (CP) — The government asked the Commons Tuesday to clear the decks for what is expected to be a major post-Christmas row over capital punishment.

The request came from Justice Minister Ron Basford as MPs went to work on a series of Criminal Code amendments introduced in July.

Basford said the changes, affecting rape, appeal, impaired driving and bail laws, should be passed quickly to make way for the post-Christmas debate on the death penalty.

The government plans to introduce so-called "peace and security" legislation that would abolish hanging while lengthening murder sentences, and tightening parole restrictions.

Before doing so, it wants MPs to dispose of the bill now before the Commons. It is awaiting second reading, approval in principle.

Opposition critics indicated Tuesday they would not block the package but Progressive Conservative justice critic Eldon Woolliams said he will urge some changes.

Squabble Over Data Release

OTTAWA (CP) — A company headed by a former aide to Prime Minister Trudeau photocopied and distributed under its own name a government document on the government's anti-inflation program, Tory Tom Cossitt said Tuesday.

He called in the Commons for an explanation by the prime minister but his motion was refused by Liberal MPs. It was made under a House rule requiring unanimous consent for a vote to be taken.

William Lee, who worked for Trudeau in two political campaigns and now is president of an Ottawa company called Executive Consultants Ltd., acknowledged in an interview that a recent document on the government's anti-inflation program was distributed to his clients.

But he said there was no improper conduct, even though the prime minister's letterhead was removed and replaced by that of his company.

The document, more than 10 pages of questions and answers compiled by the government to help sell the program to the public, was unclassified and easily available, Lee said. "We do this all the time."

PLO VOWS NO MONTREAL VIOLENCE

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Palestine Liberation Organization will commit no act of terrorism at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, a spokesman for the PLO said yesterday.

Shafik Al-Hout, vice-chairman of the PLO delegation to the United Nations, told Canadian journalists "I can assure you nothing will happen to your Olympics by any PLO man."

Asked how he could give that assurance, Al-Hout said: "I give my word of honor."

He added, however that he could no more guarantee there will be no violence than Prime Minister Trudeau can guarantee no one will throw a bomb.

"I guarantee if it does happen it is going to be condemned," Al-Hout added.

Acts of violence, such as the massacre of Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics in 1972, "have distorted our image," Al-Hout said. "We are keen to correct our image."

Throughout his press conference, and in a speech the previous evening, the PLO spokesman described the organization as "freedom fighters."

He said he was on a "friendly mission of information" in Canada to describe the PLO side of the Middle East question.

"You have been listening to the Zionist point of view for 25 years," he added.

Canadians and the rest of the world should know more about the Palestinian situation. There have been two wars in five years. "God knows what's coming. God knows if it will be confined to the Middle east."

Inflation Interpretation

OTTAWA (CP) — After a month in existence, the anti-inflation board Tuesday released its first official statement on how it will interpret the selective federal wage and price controls.

The "interim compensation bulletin" said various salary increases agreed to by a company — in a union contract or through revision of pay scales — will be exempt from the anti-inflation program as long as there is evidence they were set prior to Oct. 14, when the program was imposed. Pay increases are generally limited to 10 per cent in the first year.

A board spokesman said the statement is the first in what will be a series of interpretation bulletins dealing with questions raised by companies, unions and others.

The board is responsible for deciding when wage and price increases exceed the allowable limits. An administrator would then be responsible for ordering rollbacks or imposing penalties.

The bulletin said many companies decide at one pint in the year to increase salaries even though the increases may not apply to employees until, for example, the anniversay of the employee's hiring date.

Such increases will be exempt from the program provided they were decided upon prior to Oct. 14, as long as the date on which they take effect is no later than Oct. 13, 1976.

As previously announced, the program does not apply to collective agreements entered into prior to Oct. 14.

The board said the exemption will apply where the agreements were signed and ratified prior to that date, signed before Oct. 13 and ratified later or where the board is satisfied that oral agreement was made prior to Oct. 13 and was signed and ratified subsequently.

Pollution Trial Adjourned

NANAIMO — The trial of the Nanaimo Regional Board, Chew Excavation Ltd. and Dayton and Knight Consulting Engineers, jointly accused of polluting Departure Bay, has been adjourned until Dec. 1 for plea.

They are charged with allowing a deleterious substance to flow into the bay while installing a sewage pipeline across Nanaimo.

The pipeline project resulted in the siltation of a creek, it is alleged.

The charge was laid under the Canadian Fisheries Act.

The regional board was named as a defender in the case because it hired the contractors.

Saanich Garbage Men Will Still Carry Can

Saanich residents can look forward to at least another year of backyard garbage service and some relief from the existing system of pickups only every second week.

The public works committee Tuesday agreed to recommend to council that garbage collection be continued on the biweekly system during the eight fall and winter months but be increased to weekly pickups during the four summer months.

On the recommendation of acting chairman Ald. John McDonald, the committee will also recommend the matter of garbage collection be reviewed in the fall.

If, at that time, council considers it might be better to go to curbside service at an annual $200,000 saving, the matter will go to a referendum.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren reported result from a study made on four types of collection. All-year-round biweekly collection would cost $666,000 while curbside pickups would reduce costs to $565,000. All-year-round weekly collections raises the price to $861,000. The method endorsed by the committee will have a $731,000 price tag.

Alds. Joe Bourque and Roy Wootten made strong stands for curbside service and the savings it would produce. Bourque told of a retired citizens community in California which had curbside service. Wootten said he knew one handicapped man in Surrey who had no trouble coping with the curbside service system.

"He uses a cart which he pushes with one hand, using a cane in the other. He's very proud of his achievement," Wootten said.

"If you work out the difference in costs it comes out to about $2.50 a head per family. That's about $10 a year for pickup," Ald. Fred Severson said, "I think people are willing to pay that."

NDP's Vickery Runs in Oak Bay

Threats Force Him Out Of Race

Times News Services

Alderman Gus Boersma of Fernie, says the main reason behind his decision to withdraw Tuesday as Progressive Conservative candidate in Kootenay was a threat that his business would suffer if he ran.

Boersma, a life insurance agent, said he had been told that if he continued his bid for the seat and split the anti-New Democratic Party vote sufficiently to ensure an NDP victory in the riding, "things wouldn't do so well" for his business.

Advice given by close friends has disclosed "concealed threats" from people anxious to have only a Social Credit candidate contest the seat against the NDP, he added.

Boersma said he disagrees with the political gang-up approach being taken in the riding.

Elsewhere on the election front, Premier Barrett told a crowd of about 700 people in Fort St. John Tuesday that the British Columbia Petroleum Corp. is committed to at least 90 wells in the Peace River area and there could be up to 150 drilled by the spring breakup.

This number, Barret said, would be among the highest drilled in any previous year and the winter activity on a family basis could affect 10,000 people. He said 48 rigs now are operating and each rig employs 16 workers directly and between 60 and 80 indirectly.

In Mape Ridge, meanwhile, Social Credit leader Bill Bennett said no agreement with the federal government affecting the future of British Columbia should be signed during the provincial election campaign.

If a Social Credit government is formed after the Dec. 11 election, it would not accept any moves made "in desperation by the NDP to get elected," he warned.

The Social Credit leader predicted an announcement would be made Thursday about a federal-provincial northwest transportation agreement involving B.C. Rail.

The following candidates were nominated Tuesday.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Victoria (2 seats) — Sam Bawlf, Ian Rendle.

LIBERAL

Langley—Ken Mallinson.

PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE

Dewdney — John Green.

The Oak Bay NDP has nominated 37-year-old civil servant Ray Vickery who hopes to win over the 16 per cent of the riding who voted Liberal in the last election.

Vickery admits his party has a "terrible chance" of unseating Tory leader Scott Wallace, but he's optimistic the NDP can do much better than last time.

Nominated Tuesday night, over Bernard Shaw, Vickery said a number of NDP supporters voted for Wallace in the last election to help defeat Social Credit. A good number of these voters, he said, will revert to the NDP.

"But it's presumptious to say we have a chance of winning," said Vickery who works with the correspondence division of the B.C. education department.

A resident of 552 Victoria, Vickery has worked in the party for more than 10 years. He won the nomination at a meeting at the Henderson Park Pavilion attended by 50 voting delegates.

He intends to get a leave of absence from the education department during the campaign.

He will compete with the Socred's Frank Carson, and Dr. Wallace, and a candidate chosen tonight by the Liberals, who is expected to be Lee Jameson, president of the riding's Liberal association.

That meeting is at 8:30 p.m. at Windsor Park Pavilion.

Tonight the Liberal association in Saanich and the Islands will nominate a candidate. Victoria car dealer Edgar Rhomberg has said he will seek the nomination and Col. O. B. Philp, of 10202 MacDonald Park, retired from hte air force, is considering running.

Meeting is at 8 p.m. at Holyrood House.

BCDC Loan To City Firm

Nu-Way Cleaners of Victoria has received a $25,000 loan from the B.C. Development Corp. to expand the industrial garment rental side of its business.

The loan wass announced today by Industrial Development Minister Gary Lauk who said a $50,000 loan would also go to Silva Bay Shipyard Ltd. near Nanaimo and $75,000 to Bradson Machinery Ltd. of Port Coquitlam.

NDP Bares 'Secret Slogan

Canadian Press

The New Democratic Party has unveiled its poster and slogan for the Dec. 11 British Columbia election. Neither mention the party by name.

The slogan, "B.C. has strong leadership. Let's keep it that way," is emblazoned over a photograph showing a laughing Barrett in a navy-blue blazer, about to shake the viewer's hand.

Asked why the party's name does not appear on the poster, party secretary Clifford Scotton first checked to see if that is so, then said:

"Obviously it is a picture of an individual and the theme is of that individual's leadership."

Poll Underway with Relish . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — The hamburger poll is back again.

John Dys, a city restaurant operator, is again offering hamburgers named for leaders of British Columbia's four main political parties.

Early results after one day of selling are 47 per cent for the Bennett burger, 37 per cent for the Barrett burger, nine per cent for the Wallace burger and seven per cent for the Gibson burger.

Dys said Tuesday he wasn't putting too much stock in these initial figures since only 200 burgers were sold.

This year, in addition to offering the burgers at his own restaurant, Dys has an arrangement with a chain of 50 steakhouses throughout the province.

With the purchase of a steak or burger, consumers in these outlets will get a ballot to fill in to help Dys "elect a new hamburger for his Vancouver restaurants."

The Barrettburger "features frozen beef . . . "; the Bennett burger still has "a touch of that wacky flavor"; the Gibson burger has "an Ottawa flavor"; and the Wallaceburger is for "lonesome people who don't know if they are hungry or not."

Politicians keep a wary eye on the hamburger poll — it is the only one available because provincial Election Act bans "straw votes" — including straight-forward opinion polls — once an election writ is issued.

Jobless Newcomers Flooding In

Half Annual 7,000 Chasing Work

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A flood of newcomers is putting pressure on the Victoria employment market and creating problems for an economy that is otherwise quite strong, say local Canada Manpower officials.

The number of people coming to this area has soared to 7,000 a year, up from 2,000 in 1972.

About half these 7,000 are looking for jobs.

The growth rate in jobs is only about 3 per cent, far too low to absorb the influx of those seeking work.

As a result, unemployment stands at around 8,320 in the Greater Victoria area and their chances of finding work before spring are slim.

Many companies have placed a freeze on hiring and in some cases, particularly in the construction and logging industry, there could be some layoffs due to weather conditions over the winter.

Stan Purdy, manager of Canada Manpower for the Victoria district, stressed that the economy of the area is basically strong despite the continuing unemployment rate.

It is the strength of the Victoria economy that is attracting the migration to the city, he said.

Adding to the problem of increased migration to Victoria is the reluctance of others to leave this area.

A larger proportion of young people are looking for work here, instead of going to Vancouver as had been the pattern as recently as five years ago.

Others who normally would have followed jobs to remote areas of the province are staying in town hoping for an opening to develop.

The picture is further complicated by the increasing number of women entering the labor force.

While the local job market is flooded, there are signs of improvement, however faint.

The growth rate in jobs should be maintained at 3 per cent at least over the next 10 months.

Retail sales are higher than last year and stores are beginning to hire in anticipation of the Christmas rush.

Manufacturing and fabricating plants generally report that orders are sufficiently high to prevent any further layoffs in the immediate future.

Real estate sales are about $3 million ahead of the same period last year.

While there are 8,320 unemployed, there are 89,580 working and most of them can expect to stay on the job on a year-round basis.

Purdy said the number of jobs opening up in this area is lower than at the same time last year but it must be remembered that in 1974 the economy was unusually strong, because of the growth in the government sector at that time.

The Victoria Manpower centre was asked to fill only 6,700 jobs from April to September, down 31 per cent of 1974.

Job openings in manufacturing fell 41 per cent, while those in trucking and other transportation jobs fell 59 per cent. Government job openings were reduced 47 per cent as the provincial government's hiring restraint policy went into effect.

The numbers are startling but the decline is down from a height of remarkable vigor a year ago. There remains an underlying strength in the economy with signs of improvements.

"The job market is starting to absorb skilled workers but workers who do not have readily marketable skills will find it harder and it will take longer for them to find jobs," Purdy said.

After the usual winter layoffs the economy is expected to show strength in the spring, although not the type of surge that has been enjoyed during the past three years.

The level of jobs had been fairly constant for many years in Victoria until 1972 with openings developing only when someone retired or moved away. After that, the job openings soared as a result of provincial government hiring and the boom in the forest industry.

In 1975 the job total levelled off once again but at a much higher level than it had been in 1972. Now the job total is increasing at the rate of about 3 per cent annually, compared with a growth rate of from 6 to 8 per cent in the 1972 to 1975 boom period.

Dan Bowes, community information officer for Canada Manpower, said some recent arrivals from the Prairies have talked about returning to Alberta or Saskatchewan where the supply of jobs is higher. Many of them become disillusioned when they can't find work or encounter long strikes. However, there is little evidence that many of them follow up these sentiments by returning to the Prairies.

"The trend is very strong in the other direction. High salaries offered by the provincial government are attracting large numbers of people to this city and very few are moving away," he said.

"This growth is creating some problems for the local economy, which is otherwise quite strong."

Armor Suggested For Tree-Cutter

Twenty-one fir trees along Balmacarra Road are threatened with the axe.

Saanich's public works committee was told Tuesday night the trees must be removed to construct utility services for five new lots on the west side of the road being developed by T. L. Mann and Associates Ltd.

A spokesman for the developer said the area is heavily treed and this is the minimum number of trees that must be felled to make way for the construction.

The committee, along with municipal engineer Cliff Warren and parks administrator Frank Andrews, will view the site on Thursday.

"Do you have a coat of armor?" Ald. Roy Wootten asked other committee members," If you're going to cut down 21 trees, you're going to need it."

The developer's representative was told if the committee had no objection to the tree-felling, approval would be given the company on Friday.

EYECATCHER for Metchosin Road travellers is new $10 million sand and gravel processing plant which recently went operational. Rated at 1,100 tons per hour, the plant is expected to produce about 3 million tons of specification aggregate per year for its operators, Construction Aggregates Ltd., and this material will mainly be shipped by barge to Victoria and Vancouver. A company official said earlier, after the gravel is extracted the large terraced bowl has potential for a residential subdivision.

'Save Crystal' Plan Rocked By $1M Boost

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Total bill for restoring the old Crystal Garden building as an arboretum and aviary attraction will be about $2.7 million — over $1 million more than was roughly estimated six months ago.

The revised figure is contained in a report delivered to Victoria city council Tuesday by architects Wagg and Hambleton.

But Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the Crystal Garden committee, said today the detailed costs total was more "expected" than alarming.

He did admit, however, that the city's plan to refurbish the 50-year-old buiding now appears more beset with problems than it did a few months ago.

And he hinted that ultimately the Crystal Garden's fate will hinge on the extent of public support that is forthcoming.

"I would say that viewed in the perspective of the current national restraints, and taking into account the Saanich referendum of last Saturday, I would be loath to expend current tax revenue or existing city funds to any large extent on the redevelopment of that building," he said.

"What I am really saying is that unless we can raise the necessary capital through public subscription or other levels of government we can only proceed if we have the sanction of the voters."

Young said in the light of the Saanich referendum (in which three bylaws for sports and community facilities totalling $1.2 million were defeated) it would be "wrongful" of the city not to consult its taxpayers on the Crystal issue.

But he rejected a reporter's suggestion that the city referendum would also go down to defeat.

"There (in Saanich) it was basically a case of choosing between an expensive road program and some luxuries. We don't have that same dilemma in the city of Victoria.

"We're talking about do or die for a gracious old building, and the decision has to be made on that basis. It's really that simple."

The Wagg and Hambleton report will be made public in a few days, and Young wasn't prepared to discuss specific details today.

But he said the $2.7 million figure is based on the assumption that construction would be under way by the summer of 1976.

He also noted that the architect's scheme includes "considerably more layout than we had contemplated." Among the proposals, for instance, is a row of retail stores along the Douglas frontage, and landscaping of the forecourt area as a street patio.

Last June council approved the Crystal Garden committee's recommendation that the renovation task be carried out for a capital cost of $1.5 million.

Until now that has been the only published cost provision for the project. But Young said it was the "original figure prior to 1975 inflation."

Doomed Home a Maclure: Expert

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Doubt that a classic Victoria home earmarked for demolition is a Samuel Maclure design was dispelled today by architectural historian Martin Segger.

He was replying to a statement by Park Pacific Apartments Ltd. director Clive M. Piercy, who said no one is sure the building at 821 Burdett actually was designed by Maclure.

Park Pacific, which owns the site and an adjoining empty lot, intends to develop the combined property and has a permit to demolish the house, which was built in 1906 for the H. S. Crotty family.

"I don't really think there's much doubt about it," said Segger. "It fits very well into a series of houses he (Maclure) did in what I call the chalet style."

Maclure, who died in Victoria in 1929, designed 200 homes in the late 19th and early 20th century and had an international reputation. About 150 Maclure houses are known to survive, 80-90 of them in Greater Victoria, Segger said.

Others of the chalet style include the Munn home at 1009 Terrace (1900), the Audain home at 550 Foul Bay (1902) and the Shallcross home at 935 Foul Bay (1907), with others up-island at Somenos near Quamichan Lake, Parksville and Port Alberni.

The Somenos home also was built for the Crottys, Segger said.

Maclure built about half of his designs on the mainland, some as far as Spokane, Idaho and California. At least one was ordered to be built in the U.K. by a member of royalty.

Segger said he had not seen the original drawings for 821 Burdett, but he knows where they are and how to reach the former owner of the building who had it subdivided into apartments in 1940.

But even without having seen the drawings, Segger said architects may readily recognize features of design and construction attributable only to Maclure. It is the last example of his residential design in the central core.

Piercy said Park Pacific is conscious of the historic value of such a building and is prepared to co-operate with people who think it ought to be preserved. Meanwhile, he assured that demolition which had begun will go no further until at least the end of the month when the remaining four tenants will leave.

The city engineer's department has a stop work order on the building in consideration of tenant safety. But an attached garage, an entrance canopy, some interior finishing and hardware have been removed.

"This type of thing concerns us," Piercy said. "We'd like to do what's best for the city. We have a good reputation and we'd like to keep it."

He offered to get an estimate on the cost of moving the house to another site, which had been suggested as a means of preserving the house by the Hallmark Society.

But Piercy also pointed out that in 1973 the city Advisory Planning Commission suggested the property be consolidated with the adjoining Park Pacific property.

It would not be economic to convert the house into a suite of offices, he said. Building codes would require complete replacement of plumbing and wiring, which would necessitate gutting the interior, he added.

Park Pacific is paying for tenant moving costs and helping them find alternative accommodation.

Segger, a member of the city's heritage building advisory committee, agreed with Piercy that there are better Maclure homes to save, but he stressed the environmental and scholarly value of 821 Burdett.

The streetscape in the Law Courts and Christ Church cathedral precinct is important and the house is a visual reference for scholarly purposes.

"Somewhere you have to stop the erosion of the natural vistas for which Victoria is noted," Segger said.

Piercy said Park Pacific has undertaken to donate items of hardware from the house which the provincial museum is interested in acquiring.

SORRY ABOUT THAT

When a consultant undertakes to carry out a specific task for $10,000 he should complete it without asking for additional funds, city aldermen agreed Tuesday.

Consultant Arthur Slipper, who was commissioned under the Neighborhood Improvement Program to advise on the needs for a community centre in Victoria West, had asked for an extra $1,437 which he said was incurred in the preparation of his report.

He explained in a letter that the cost overrun was "largely due to expenses and services in the final stages of the study being higher than expected."

The request was forwarded with a recommendation for approval from planning director Geoff Greenhalgh, but members of the N.I.P. committee objected to the principle involved.

Said Ald. Mike Young: "He took this assignment on the basis it was going to be a $10,000 fee. If he saw it (the costs) going over he should have approached council or this committee before proceeding any further."

The committee recommended that council turn down Slipper's request.

New Charges To Be Laid Against Clerk

A charge of impaired driving laid against Victoria city clerk Morran Waller last March 28 was dismissed Tuesday minutes after a trial began before Judge Harold Alder in provincial court.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood told the court there had been an error on the information and that no plea had been entered, thus rendering the charge a nullity.

Alder upheld Owen-Flood's motion and quashed the charge.

Waller, of 1813 Lawndale, was charged by Oak Bay police following an incident on Foul Bay Road.

Prosecutor Peter Hull said outside court new charges of impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol level over .08 will be laid.

Airwaves Labor of Love for Prema

When I was writing my recent series on Port Angeles, I bumped into Prema Mullick — in a roundabout sort of way.

I mean, she wasn't there really. But I heard a lot about her and the different kind of program she produces for radio station KONP.

At the time I was chatting with KONP owner George Buck about the close relationship between his city and Victoria. And he said that, yes, his station is still broadcasting the popular summer program Dock Time in which people are interviewed as they are about to board the ferry for Victoria.

And then there was Prema. She, too, helped form a bridge of communication across the Juan de Fuca Strait.

Prema?

It means "love" in the Punjabi language of India.

And later I sat close to a roaring fire in a comfortable home in the Uplands listening to the haunting lilt of the sitar. And I felt the warmth of sharing.

Then the beat changed to the throbbing theme song from the movie "Hare Krishna, Hare Rama" which tells of a girl born in Montreal who goes to live with her hippie friends in Nepal. And the beauty of the music and the pronunciation of the words are far different from the chanting of the shorn gents you may have heard on street corners here.

. . . bridging the strait

It is this music and much more like it, ranging through the pop field to the classic playing of Ravi Shankar, that Prema Mullick shares with the 6,000 to 7,000 East Indians living in Greater Victoria. Her collection of 800 albums including both the old and modern music of India form the basis of her one-hour program broadcast partly in Hindi and partly in Punjabi at 9:30 each Sunday morning. That's on KONP, which is at 1450 on the dial.

Mostly it's an hour of listening music but the program also includes news items from the Victoria Cultural Association of India and Canada, community news and two or three advertisements, which Mrs. Mullick is grateful for.

She records the commercials herself and even sings the jingles for firms like The Traders and Metro Toyota — in Hindi. "See how much car your money can buy . . ."

The program, started just over a year ago, is immensely popular with East Indian people here. Apart from the one film a week shown at the Fox Cinema, it's the only cultural link Indians have with their homeland.

In most Indian homes here on a Sunday morning, says Prema, the people are ready with their tape recorders and they tape the music so they can hear it again and again.

Prema's husband Dr. Bir Mullick, a scientist at Victoria's Pacific Forest Research Centre, who admits he subsidizes the program because of his wife's great love of music, says:

"We are reasonably sure that there isn't an East Indian family in Victoria that doesn't listen to it."

Now the people take it for granted and if Prema takes a holiday she is flooded with phone calls when she gets back. They are worried it has been stopped. But, she says, they don't realize the work, the suffering that lies behind it.

The Mullicks, who have two daughters — Ramita who is 20 and is at UVic and Nita who is 16 and at high school — came from India in 1956. They lived at first in Vancouver, where Bir attended UBC.

Prema's Canadian radio career started when an East Indian who had a travel agency needed someone to write the script for a program for him. And he heard that Mrs. Mullick had worked on a children's program on the All India Radio in Jullander in the Punjab.

This began her program on CKLG Vancouver and one year later she started her popular broadcast from KERI Bellingham, which ran for five years.

There was nothing for the East Indians when the Mullicks came to Victoria two years ago. Prema approached the Victoria stations but they weren't very interested. And anyway, she says, their rates were too high.

max low

So she tried Port Angeles and Buck jumped at the chance.

For the first four months, Mrs. Mullick went over on the ferry every Saturday to record the program live. She paid her own fares and hotel expenses. Later it was changed from Saturday night, because it clashed with prime time on television.

Then Mrs. Mullick bought her own equipment — record players, amplifiers, tape recorders, a microphone —, and set up her own mini studio at home. She even pays $15 a month to B.C. Tel for a broadcast line so she can still record live in an emergency. Although usually the program is done on a Thursday evening and the tape sent by ferry to Port Angeles.

Of course, with the small number of commercials, the program makes no money.

"In fact, I have to put some money out of my pocket to pay Mr. Buck," says Prema.

But she doesn't mind.

And it's a lot of work for Mrs. Mullick, who is also employed at Montreal Trust. What started as an hour and-a-half effort now takes two evenings to prepare and a third evening to record.

But still she doesn't mind.

"To know that what I'm doing is appreciated makes me happy," she says simply.

"At first when we came here from India, the first 10 years we longed to hear our music but there was no outlet," she explains. "To the people of India music means so much. What ever mood you're in you dance and sing.

"Your own language, your own culture . . . is the food of your soul."

62 THEFTS CHARGED

Two Victoria women appeared in provincial court Tuesday charged with 62 counts of theft and possession of stolen property.

The charges followed raids in Esquimalt and Saanich Saturday when Saanich police said several thousand dollars worth of stolen items was recovered.

Margaret Elizabeth Atkinson, 34, of 574 Tena Place, faces the bulk of the charges — 48 so far — while co-accused Jean Hilda Carter, 33, of 352 Burnside West, faces 14.

Both were remanded to Nov. 25 for election of trial method and plea.

The offences they are charged with amount to "wholesale plunder," said Judge William Ostler.

Merchandise involved included sport equipment from McQuade's Marine Supply, clothing from Eaton's, a portable radio from Bishop's Hardware, and numerous items stolen from persons unknown.

Prosecutor Nick Lang said Carter is a waitress and runs a home for foster children approved by the department of human resources.

Atkinson is a nurses' aide in the Victoria area.

Defence cousel is Mike O'Connor for Carter and Peter Klassen for Atkinson.

Rape Victim Quizzed On Recognition of Man

The complainant in a rape charge told county court Tuesday Burton Juston Tiffin, 660 Rockingham, was the man who assaulted her in her bedroom Feb. 2.

But under cross-xamination by defence counsel Don Farquhar, she said "I cannot say" why at the preliminary hearing she couldn't say with total assurance Tiffin was the man in the bedroom yet at the trial she can.

The case is being heard by a jury and Judge Montague Drake.

The complainant, a 26-year-old mother of two daughters, said she awoke at 5 a.m. Feb. 2 to find a man standing and bending over her bed with his hand beneath the bedclothes.

She said she was "shocked, scared." The man said "don't make a sound or your daughter's dead," she said.

(One daughter, then seven, was asleep in a cot in the same room.)

"I was terrified. Shocked. Just darn good and scared," she told the court.

After identifying Tiffin in court, she said she submitted to sexual intercourse because "I was afraid of what he would do to my daughter and afraid for myself." She said she believed the threat.

In cross-examination, she agreed the bedroom was "very dark," and there was no illumination.

All you saw was an outline, Farquhar suggested.

"I told you what I saw," she replied, referring to certain physical descriptions she gave of the man.

She was referred to evidence she gave at the preliminary hearing in which she said, in answer to a question whether she was able to see the man, "yes, just pretty well an outline" and his height and hair.

Is that your evidence today, Farquhar asked.

"All I can say is what I saw, is what I've already told you," she replied.

She was referred to the written answer she gave when she picked out Tiffin in a police lineup. The answer said "yes I think Number 8."

Why did you use the word "I think," asked Farquhar.

"I don't know."

There must have been a reason. Why?

"I don't know why."

Farquhar suggested she wasn't certain.

"No."

Did you usually use "I think" when you are not positive?

"Yes."

A Crown witness, Doris LeBlanc, said she met Tiffin in the Esquimalt Legion on the evening of Feb. 1 and they later went to a restaurant and then to a boarding house. He left about 3 a.m., she said.

In coss-examination, she said "he didn't misbehave in any way. He was a gentleman."

The trial continued today. Crown counsel is David Lisson, assisted by Barry Mah Ming. Brian MacKenzie is assisting Farquhar.

Crime Inquiry Told of Beating

MONTREAL (CP) — Testimony centred on the activities of alleged underworld figure Paolo Violi for the second consecutive day Tuesday at the Quebec Police Commission's inquiry into organized crime.

One witness said he was beaten after ignoring warnings not to open a poolroom in territory controlled by Violi.

Two other men said they were forced to pay Violi $1,000 a year in "Christmas presents" so they could operate their business in peace.

Violi was described at Monday's hearings as a former business associate of Vincenzo (Vic) Cotroni, described earlier at the inquiry as head of Montreal's underworld.

Mauro Marchettini, the victim of the beating, told the inquiry he tried in the fall of 1969 to open a poolroom in the city's northest end, near a similar establishment owned by Violi.

Marchettini said that despite warnings from Franco Violi, Paolo's brother, that such a move would not be profitable, he went ahead because he had already signed a lease.

Marchettini said he was later beaten with a stick, leaving him with a broken tooth and black eyes.

He said he moved out of the area when a son-in-law of Giuseppe Cotroni, Vic's brother, bought his building and agreed to cancel the lease. he said he lost about $2,500.

Earlier, brothers Lino and Quintino Simaglia said they have paid Paolo Violi $1,000 every year since 1971 to buy protection for their small business.

The name of their business was ordered withheld and the brothers were granted police protection after Quintino Simaglia nervously told the inquiry the $1,000 gifts bought protection "only in the business, not int court."

The inquiry continues today.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, the legal challenge to the constitutionality of Quebec's crime probe began in the Supreme Court of Canada and already one key scheduled witness has sought to be excused from appearing until the court makes its ruling.

A lawyer for Cotroni said that the Supreme Court is being asked to block a subpoena calling for Cottroni to testify Nov. 27.

The lawyer said the court would be asked today to hear the request quickly instead of waiting 'till Dec. 1 when it would normally deal with such requests.

The reason for the request was that the court might find the Quebec Police Commission inquiry invalid and it was preferable to wait until that issue was settled.

Cotroni, president of Regrio Foods Ltd. in Montreal, has already testified before the inquiry and was sentenced to one year for contempt last July, 1974. He was released on bail last February.

In the constitutional test before the high court, Montreal lawyer Leo-Rene Maranda argued for more than two hours yesterday that Quebec did not have the power to set up such an inquiry.

In claiming on behalf of two clients that the inquiry is unconstitutional, Maranda is appealing a Quebec Court of Appeal decision which upheld a decision by former crime inquiry chairman Judge Rheal Brunet.

Maranda's clients, Nicola Di Iorio and Gerard Fontaine, refused to testify when called before the inquiry earlier this year and were sentenced to one year in jail by Judge Brunet.

Maranda, who was the only one to address the court on the case yesterday, presented arguments that Quebec had run afoul of federal powers in setting up the inquiry.

Greenpeace Presses U.S. to Ban Whaling

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Victoria Greenpeace Foundation has written to U.S. Senator Warren Magnusson asking for his support in banning the capture of live killer whales in western U.S. coastal waters.

The letter is sent in response to a recent announcement by the State of Washington and U.S. federal fisheries department that permits for the capture of 14 Orca whales have been issued.

Ten of the whales are to be captured by the University of Washington for research purposes and four by San Diego's Sea World of the Pacific.

The 10 captured by the university crew will have electronic devices attached to their dorsal fins and then released.

The four captured by Sea World are destined for oceanariums in the U.S. and Europe at $100,000 each.

Bob Ikle, Victoria spokesman for the Greenpeace group, condemned the action.

"We're not opposed to research as such but the point is," he said, "many whales are injured or killed by the capture attempts alone not to mention the psychological torment that the whales have to go through."

He said Sea World backers have only "dollar signs in their eyes" and that their sole interest was the crowd-drawing appeal of the Ocra.

Ikle said his group opposed the confinement of any animal in a setting which does not match the animal's natural environment. And in the case of Orca whales, that's impossible to duplicate.

He noted all whale products have been officially banned in the U.S. and that the government, by issuing capture permits, was allowing people to flout the law.

Greenpeace concern for the killer whale population erupted this summer when Bob Wright of Oak Bay's Sealand of the Pacific trapped six specimens in Pedder Bay. (Two were kept for aquariums in Oak Bay and Niagara Falls Ont., three released and one was unaccounted for.)

As a result of that protest the Victoria Greenpeace chapter was formed and the pressure brought to bear on the government resulted in Recreation Minister Jack Radford's announcement in September of an immediate moratorium on the capture of whales in B.C. waters.

Ikle lauded the government's quick action and hoped the American authorities would follow.

KILLER WHALE BAN LAUDED

VANCOUVER (CP) — An international conference on whales has praised Premier Dave Barrett for halting the capture of killer whales in British Columbia waters, says a representative of the Greenpeace foundation.

Paul Watson said Monday that the international symposium at the University of Indiana in Bloomington sent a congratulatory telegram to Barrett after passing a resolution in support of United States legislation calling for a killer whale sanctuary in Puget Sound.

Langley Recount Sought

LANGLEY (CP) — Mayor George Preston of Langley district said Tuesday he will seek a judicial recount of voting which saw him defeated Saturday by George Driediger, former president of the provincial Social Credit Party.

Driediger polled 2,131 votes to Preston's 2,074 in the initial counting.

Preston said there were about 80 ballots declared spoiled Saturday and these could make a difference in the final outcome.

Meanwhile, a recount of Surrey City's mayoralty ballots began Tuesday in the municipal hall.

Ald. Ed McKitka was declared elected Saturday, but only 50 votes separated him from Ald. Rita Johnson who had also sought the post being vacated by Mayor Bill Vander Zalm on Dec. 31.

McKitka polled 5,977 votes to Mrs. Johnson's 5,927. Three other mayoral candidates split the remaining 4,724 votes.

Car Crunched

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who was killed Tuesday in a spectacular crash on HIghway 401 has been identified as Robert Samiss of Mt. Lehman.

The 40-year-old Vancouver stockbroker was driving a sports car which collided with another car travelling in the same direction. The sports car went out of control and crossed the median into the path of a truck which rode over the smaller car, crushing its fibreglass body.

Result Changed

RICHMOND (CP) — A recount of votes in Saturday's municipal lelectin here resulted Tuesday in the re-election of incumbent Alderman Linda Cliff. On first count Saturday, she had 4,534 votes to 4,538 for newcomer John Bargen. However, the recount put her ahead 4,567 voters to 4,548.

Verdict Delayed

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Verdict in the trial of two men charged with plotting to kill the former wife of one of them will be given Nov. 28.

Dale Miller, 51, of nearby Pritchard, and Dave Thomas, 37, of Kamloops, are charged with conspiring last January to murder Miller's divorced wife, and with hiring police undercover agent Donald Paradon to murder the woman. Both charges carry terms of life imprisonment.

Strike Notice

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of the Workers Compensation Board served 72-hour strike notice Tuesday. A union spokesman said the sides were far apart in negotiations, especially in nonemonetary items. Base rates were unavailable.

Complaint Filed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union spokesman Glen Bowles said the United Transportation Union Tuesday filed a complaint with the B.C. Labor Relations Board that B.C. Railway has been trying to humiliate UTU officials by disseminating false information through company supervisors. B.C. Rail spokesman Hugh Armstrong said the railway isn't trying to discredit anyone.

Hut Destroyed

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Vandals caused about $30,000 damage Tuesday when they destroyed a first-aid hut and two cubicles for chairlift attendants in Cyprus Bowl. Police were investigating. Tom Moore, district superintendent of the provincial parks branch, said the vandals managed to start a bulldozer and used iit to destroy the structures.

Fliers Identified

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials have identified the dead pilot and two missing passengers from a Cessna 180 float plane that crashed Sunday near the mouth of Rivers Inlet, 250 miles northwest of here.

The pilot was James Henry Kennedy, 44, of Vancouver. Daniel David Walkus, 42, of Rivers Inlet and Brian Joseph Lloyd McIntyre, 22, of Garden Bay, were identified as the missing passengers.

Murder Feared In Matsqui Girl's Death

MATSQUI (CP) —It is likely that an 11-year-old girl whose body was found in bushland near the Fraser River was murdered, police said Tuesday.

They said the body of Kathy Herbert, who disappeared last Sept. 24, was found by children in a wooded area about five miles from her home.

She was the object of a search last October by hundreds of residents of the area and soldiers from the Chilliwack Canadian forces base.

Exact location where the body was found was not revealed, but a spokesman said that no effort had been made to bury it.

A police spokesman said the discovery indicated foul play.

Dominion

Dominion Stores Ltd. reports earnings for the 26 weeks ended Sept. 20 of $9,593,000 or $1.12 a share compared with $7,098,000 or 91 cents a share for the same period last year.

Sales in the period totalled $922,827,000, an increase of almost $145 million over the comparable period in 1974.

President Thomas Bolton said earnings this year were the equvalent of 1.04 cents per dollar of sales.

He said this "is too low in relation to the company's capital and inventory requirements and in relation to the need of shareholders to receive a fair return on their investment."

Earnings for the 13 weeks ended Sept. 20 were $4,774,000 of $1.02 a share compared with $3,245,000 or 82 cents a share in the second quarter last year.

Bank of B.C.

The Bank of British Columbia reports that total assets for the 1975 fiscal year increased 29.7 per cent from the 1974 fiscal year.

Total assets increased to $625 million from $481.8 million last year.

Balance of revenue after provisions for income taxes was $2.8 million this year compared with $873,704 last year.

The bank said in a news release that 765,832 shares were issued last year compared with 510,555 shares the previous year.

A. E. Hall, bank president, said that two new branches were opened in B.C. during 1975, and that expansion on B.C. and Alberta would continue.

Hopes Ride on Chevette

DETROIT (UPI) — Confidence of strong 1976 car sales, General Motors plans a 30 per cent increase in car and truck production early next year, with Chevrolet's popular subcompact Chevette a key factor in the expansion.

GM chairman Thomas Murphy said assembly plants in Lakewood, Ga., South Gate, Calif., and Van Nuys, Calif., will assume most of the new output burden.

More than 2,200 jobs will be reinstated Jan. 19, for a renewed second shift at the Lakewood facility, but employment increases for other operations were not immediately released.

Second shift Pontiac passenger car operations at Lakewood were halted in March of 1974, and truck production there ceased last January.

"This action is in line with the strengthening new car sales market and in confident anticipation of further strengtheneing in the months ahead," Murphy said.

Murphy's announcement came a day after Ford revealed plans to boost fourth quarter production by 12,200 units to meet strengthening demand for 1976-model cars and trucks.

Murphy also said that on March 1 the South Gate plant will become the second in the nation producing the subcompact Chevrolet Chevette. The Wilmington, Del., plant now produces 5,200 units a week, and South Gate will add another 1,600 to the weekly total.

Gov't Must Cut Social Aid To Curb Inflation, Says CA

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

If Ottawa really wants to control inflation it must reduce its own spending even if this means cutting back on such programs as family allowances and social assistance, G. C. Gray, president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of B.C., said in Victoria Tuesday.

Excessive government spending is the prime cause of inflation, he said.

"If the government really wants to beat inflation it has to reduce its own spending," he told a luncheon meeting of Oak Bay Rotary at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Gray said the government dole is such a firmly entrenched idea that both politicians and the public accept it as a fact of life.

"I suppose I am politically naive enough to expect our government to have the guts to cut back on programs which may affect the general public, such as family assistance, unemployment insurance or welfare — even though a curtailment of these programs need not necessarily affect the indigent, the poor, and the needy," he said.

"I'm not talking about cutting back on government support for people who are genuinely in need. But I know there are many Canadians today who could get by without a family allowance cheque.

"There are many Canadians, particularly our young people, who see unemployment insurance benefit sas a right to which they are entitled."

He stressed that in many cases government benefit payments go to people who have no genuine need.

"It would be strong medicine indeed to ask Canadians to give up any of their rights to participate in the government dole but this is what is needed if the government is to effectively stop the onslaught of inflation."

Gray said the federal government has indicated it plans to restrain its spending but not curtail it. Growth in the number of new federal employees has been limited to 1.5 per cent above the level authorized in the estimates.

If all government employees are permitted the top level of 12 per cent pay increases, the growth in the federal payrool would be more than 12 per cent because of the increase in the number of employees, he said.

The government should rethink its program and begin to reduce its spending, even if it must sacrifice some of its politically popular programs.

Unless it does this, inflation will continue to be a probelm in Canada, he said.

Despite his reservations about the effectiveness of the federal guidelines, Gray said he fully supports the program introduced by Ottawa.

"This is not to say that businessmen are happy with controls. No Canadian can be happy with controls. But who can be happy with uncontrolled inflation?"

MOROCCO MARCHERS BREAK CAMP . . .

RABAT (AP) — Morocco's 350,000 invaders of the Spanish Sahara were ordered to break camp today and prepare to return home following the Spanish parliament's approval of legislation paving the way for transfer of the territory to Morocco and Mauritania.

Military sources said the first convoys of the civilian volunteers who began arriving in the southern desert four weeks ago would leave Tarfaya, their base north of the border, today or Thursday.

King Hassan in a broadcast Monday said the march ended in triumph.

The Cortes, Spain's parliament, voted 345 to 4 Tuesday to approve a decolonization law ending Spanish rule in the Sahara on Feb. 28, 1976. Spain's ambassador to the United Nations, Jaime de Pinies, said in New York that his government agreed to set up an interim administration in the colony with auxiliary governors from Morocco and Mauritania.

De Pinies indicated that Spain agreed to cede the territory to Morocco and Mauritania after the UN Security Council was unable to stop Hassan's march.

He said the wishes of the 80,000 people of the territory concerning their poltical future will be determined through the Jemaa, the territorial assembly of the territory, which includes vast phosphate desposits, and Mauritania will get the southern part adjoining its borders.

The agreement worked out in Madrid also guarantees Spain's $625-million investment in the phosphate mines and provides for joint Spanish - Moroccan operation of the industry.

The agreement left Algeria and the Saharan independence movement it backed, the Polisario Front, out in the cold. The UN representative of the Front, Amid Bashir, predicted "a bloody war which would have disastrous consequences on our region."

Spain originally proposed a self-determination referendum for the territory, a proposal Algeria supported because it believed the people would vote for independence and Algeria could dominate the new nation through the Plisario Front.

But after the International Court of Justice rejected the claims of Morocco and Mauritania to sovereignty over the area, Hassan summoned his people to march across the border to establish Morocco's claim.

OPEC Sets Up Own Aid Scheme

VIENNA (UPI) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has decided to create its own special agency to administer a $1 billion aid fund for developing nations.

OPEC officials said Tuesday they had considered turning the fund over to an international organization such as the World Bank or International Monetary Fund, but finally decided to create a special OPEC unit to run the program.

Finance ministers at a two-day OPEC conference voted to establish the fund for interest-free loans to developing nations next year to help them meet balance of payment deficits caused by huge oil bills.

A communique released at the end of the conference Tuesday night said the ministers decided to recommend the plan to their governments. OPEC officials said the ministers had been empowered to act and approval is taken for granted.

Iranian oil minister Jamshid Amouzegar said the decision was unanimous and all 13 OPEC members would contribute to the fund.

He indicated OPEC accepted the Iranian proposal to raise the $1 billion by assessing each OPEC member 10 cents on each barrel of exported oil.

Iran had said it would establish its own aid program if OPEC failed to act as a body.

Woman MD Pulled Plug

LONDON (Reuter) — A woman doctor said on television Tuesday night that she switched off a machine that was supporting a man's life.

Dr. Miriam Stoppard, 37, wife of playwright Tom Stoppard, said on an Independent Television program, The Right to Live — The Right to Die, that it was one of the most difficult decisions she has ever had to take.

The 27-year-old man had suffered a cardiac arrest, and was connected to equipment supporting his vital organs.

"One morning, after giving it a lot of thought, I got up and switched the machines off," she said.

Dr. Stoppard said the consensus of medical experts visiting the man's ward was that he was medically dead.

"It is not a revelation or anything dramatic, it's a thing doctors do every day of the week," she said.

Rhodesia Pact Reported Set

DAR ES SALAAM — WP) — A Rhodesian settlement that would give partial control of the government to black nationalists has been worked out by South African Prime Minister John Vorster, Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, Rhodesian nationalist leader Joshua Nnomo and Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, according to a well-placed Zambian government source.

The source, who asked to remain anonymous, said that the agreement reached between the four is scheduled to be implemented on Dec. 23 in time for the Zambia-Rhodesia border to be reopened for Christmas.

To set the stage for the arrangement, Kaunda sent a message to Vorster assuring the latter of Zambia's full support for Nnomo, who leads a breakaway faction of the African National Council.

Vorster, the source explained, is anxious to see Nnomo come to power in Rhodesia to assure a stable and moderate, "buffer state" for the South African white minority regime.

Vorster in turn applied full pressure on Smith to reach a settlement with Nnomo. Monday Nnomo announced here that he expects a preliminary agreement with Smith to be announced in 10 days and a Rhodesian constitutional conference to follow soon after.

Argentine Minister Hunted

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A federal judge investigating alleged corruption at the highest government levels has ordered the arrest of a former social welfare minister.

Judge Alfredo Nocetti issued a warrant Tuesday for Carlos Villone, who served as welfare minister for 10 days last July. The charges were not made public and Villone's whereabouts were not known.

Another former welfare minister, Rodolfo Roballos, was arrested Nov. 4 and charged with mishandling government funds.

Villone has been linked to alleged graft involving a bus company that had contracts with the ministry.

In another scandal involving the Peron government, a congressional committee Tuesday began investigating alleged misuse of charity funds.

Islanders May Not See It But Sabres Are Different

By The Canadian Press

Buffalo coach Floyd Smith says this year's edition of the Sabres is better than last year's, but they all look the same to New York Islanders.

Buffalo continued its mastery over th eIslanders with a 3-1 National Hockey League victory in Uniondale, N.Y., Tuesday night. The two clubs have met 16 times over a four-year period since the Islanders came into the league and Buffalo has yet to lose. Tuesday night's victory gave the Sabres a lifetime 11-0-5 mark against the Islanders.

It was also Buffalo's 14th victory of the season — tops in the NHL.

"We're playing better this year," said Smith, who coached the Sabres into the finals of the Stanley Cup playoffs last time around. "We're more polished. We don't panic any more when we get down by a goal. We just have more experience."

In other NHL games Tuesday night, Toronto Maple Leafs downed Washington Capitals 4-2, Vancouver Canucks and Atlanta Flames played to a 2-2 tie, California Seals beat Pittsburgh Penguins 5-1 and Minnesota North Stars defeated St. Louis Blues 5-1.

Rene Robert put Buffalo on the scoreboard just 29 seconds into the game when he rammed home a pass from Gil Perreault from 15 feet out. Perreault set the goal up by picking off an Islanders pass.

Danny Gare made it 2-0 2½ minutes into the third period when he poked a shot past goalie Glen Resch from the crease.

Eddie Westfall got the lone Islander goal eight minutes into the final period and Buffalo's Peter McNab closed out the scoring with a goal at 16:48.

It was New York's fourth loss in a row.

Dennis Maruk, playing his first season in the NHL after a junior career with London Knights of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, scored four goals to lead the improved Seals to their victory over Pittsburgh.

Maruk, the second-round draft choice of the Seals last June, had scored only three goals in 20 games with California this season. All three of those points and one of his four Tuesday night were scored while his team was short-handed.

Darryl Sittler, Borje Salming, Lanny McDonald and Stan Weir scored goals for the Leafs in their win over the Capitals. The win moved Toronto into sole possession of second place in the Adams Division, two points ahead of Boston Bruins.

The loss was Washington's 15th in 19 games this season along with two ties.

Garry Monahan and Gerry O'Flaherty scored third-period goals to help the Canucks salvage their tie.

Fastball: Bates' Bell Plans for the World

Meanwhile, Bates are preparing for the World fastball (softball) championships to be held in New Zealand early in the new year. Bates, in case it has escaped your mind, are Victoria's very own Canadian men's fastball champions, and hope to repeat for Canada, the honor of winning the World. Canada, represented by Richmond Hill Dynes of Ontario, won the last world tournament in Manila in 1972.

Getting a team prepared for such an event has been, and still is, a trying experience for manager Jack Bell. Not that he hasn't got enough to do, being the local manager for the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia where during and since the recent strike situation things undoubtedly have been a little sticky.

Of course the big issue is money and Bates are on the prowl trying to meet a budget that will total $39,260 over-all. The federal government will take care of the transportation cost for 19 officials, umpires, players, etc., and the host New Zealand softball organization will house the competing teams during the tournament proper.

That magic figure of 19 theoretically includes 17 players and the team manager and coach. However, the CASA, in its spirit of benevolence, has included two umpires in the party, at NO cost for transportation to the CASA. Bates, who must meet this extra tariff, for their part feel that besides the manager and coach, others who should go are those who have contributed to, and are a part of, the team, such as the assistant manager, trainer, statistician, et al.

Sponsor Herb Bate, in another of his magnanimous gestures which have become a trademark through the years, says he'll exempt himself from the team budget and pay his own and his wife's way.

All of which works out to the fact that Bell has a $22,000 nut to crack. And reaction, so far, he says, has been excellent. Dances, draws and dinners have been held and are planned. The B.C. Softball Association has assured its support. The povincial and the city governments have been approached and if present plans work out there will be a $100 a plate dinner announced shortly. In addition there have been several private donations all of which will be acknowledged in due time.

It was rather significant a few weeks ago when Bates and London Boxing Club were honored at a reception by the city. Mayor Peter Pollen made it quite clear then that a request for assistance would be favorably received.

"There are a number of aldermen and civic officials here," he said in congratulating Bates. "Start lobbying."

So things are actually going along nicely, Bates also having received assistance from a fund derived from proceeds of the 1974 Canadian softball championships here. And meanwhile the club is in serious training at the Uvic gymnasium, University authoriteies having contributed the facilties to the Bates program.

The team that will make the trip is basically the same which won the Canadian. The additions will be Andy Konapacki and Jim McMillan of Vancouver and Pete Landers from Ontario.

Pitcher Pat Coffey, who has moved to Prince George, and Larry Cole, who will be attending school, and who were pickups from the local league for Bates at the Canadian, will not be making the trip.

Konapacki will remain in the city and play for Bates next season and it is reported he plans to join the city police force.

Bell also said that when he phoned Landers and asked him if he would be willing to play for Victoria, the answer was: "I'd be really hanored to come. I've never played in the World and I would enjoy being your fourth man."

And there's little doubt that Landers should help. He's either No. 1 in the nation or close to it, depending on what day Stan Kern or Dave Ruthowsky choose to throw their best pitch; and with Konapacki, obviously the best on the mainland, Bell feels "we've got a shot. I think we'll win."

Of course, that's a long-range forecast and obviously prejudiced. But that's what managers are for too; and, in preparation for the tournament, Bates are leaving town about nine days ahead of the main party of Victoria fans and have already completed plans for a six-game exhibition series, which may be increased to eight.

"There is no use going if we are not going to be ready," said Bell. "And we will. I'm certain we will be a credit to the city, too."

IN SHORT

Brothers Boost Parkland

Brothers Stuart and Tom Montgomery are putting some zip into Parkland's basketball attack this season.

Stuart scored 28 points and Tom dropped 10 Tuesday as the Sidney squad defeated Cowichan Timbermen 66-48 in a high school boys' exhibition at Duncan.

Pat Smith and Peter Wilson both scored eight points for Timbermen.

Exhibition play continues tonight with the Braves hosting Nanaimo Hubsters at Belmont, starting at 7 p.m.

Elsewhere:

Fergie Jenkins, the newest member of Boston Red Sox, says he's looking foreward to playing baseball with the American league champions next season, but he'd rather be wearing a Detroit Tiger or Montreal Expos uniform.

"I'd like Detroit because it's only 50 miles from my home," Jenkins said Tuesday, commenting on his trade by Texas Rangers earlier this week. "I'd also like to play for Montreal because I'm a Canadian."

But the 32-year-old Chatham, Ont., native won't mind pitching for Red Sox "because they're a better ball club" than the one that traded him away this week.

Canada's John Hawes of Pointe Claire, Que., won the 30-metre freestyle swimming event Tuesday in the modern Pentathlon world championships at Mexico City, but two-time world champion Pavel Ldenev of Russia still leads the over-all standing.

The U.S. won Tuesday's swimming competition with Canada finishing second but Hungary continues to lead the over-all team standing. A total of 47 athletes from 17 nations are competing in the championship which includes equestrian, shooting and cross-country racing as well as swimming.

Eckhard Krautzun, a 34-year-old German who resigned earlier this year as coach of Canada's national soccer team, has been named head coach of Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League. He succeeds Jim Easton, whose contract was not renewed after the 1975 season.

Don't Destroy

The Olympic Dream—Owens

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Olympic champion Jesse Owens said Tuesday professional athletes and federal governments should not be involved in Olympic competition.

"When you start talking about using professional athletes, what does that do to the kid of 13 with his Olympic dream?" asked the former United States sprint star. "What does it do the the kid in the ghetto, the little cat who lived on hope?"

Owens, now a young-looking 62 and a successful public relatins specialist, made history at the 1936 Olympics at Berlin by winning four gold medals.

Owens was in New York to accept a $10,000 cheque on behalf of the U.S. Olympic Committee from the Canadian Olympic Coin Program, which he has been promoting in network television commercials.

Proceeds from the sale of these silver medals, commemorative of the 1976 Montreal Games, has brought $260,000 into the U.S. Olympic coffers, with a $1 million total expected.

"I hope the government never subsidizes our Olympic program," Owens said. "America doesn't send a team to the Olympics, Americans do. The people who chip in their nickles and dimes, the industries which contribute large sums — they become just as much a part of the team as the athletes themselves."

Owen's visit here came a week after Billie Jean King told the president's Commission on Olympic Sports that the Olympic Games should be thrown open to professionals in order to put the best available talent on the field.

"What does Billie Jean know about it?" Jesse asked. "She is a tennis player. She has never competed in the Olympics."

The American system of providing athletes with a college education through scholarships was "... the best way," he said.

The practice of tabulating Olympic team medal totals should be discontinued, Owens said. "What difference does it make how many medals a country wins? Why do we have to be the best?

"I'm as patriotic as anybody but I am against super nationalism. It is discouraging and demeaning to the small countries ...

"But I don't want to see elimination of the flags, the anthems and the medal ceremonies.

"These are all part of the big dream. Take them away and what do you have? Just another backyard track meet."

Nordiques Pull Ahead As Aeros Ground Jets

By The Canadian Press

It was a rough night Tuesday for clubs in the Canadian Divison of the World Hockey Association.

Out of four WHA games, only Quebec Nordiques managed to emerge victorious by dumping Cincinnati Stingers 6-4. In other games, Houston Aeros edged Winnipeg Jets 3-2, San Diego Mariners downed Calgary Cowboys 6-2 and Denver Spurs topped Edmonton Oilers 6-3.

The victory solidified Quebec's hold on first place in the Canadian division with 28 points, four ahead of Winnipeg. Edmonton is fourth with 18 points, followed by Calgarp with 17 and Toronto with 10.

At Quebec before a crowd of 12,076, the Nordiques' largest of the season, two goals from Marc Tardif and Real Cloutier sparked Quebec to victory after repelling an aborted Cincinnati comeback.

In Winnipeg, two goals by Len Lund powered the Aeros to victory against the Jets. Murray Hall scored the other Houston goal, the game-winner ,while Peter Sullivan with his seventh of the season and Bobby Hull with his eighth countered for Winnipeg. Both Jet goals were scored in the final period.

In Calgary, the Mariners jumped into a commanding lead to defeat the Cowboys before a crowd of 4,180. John French paced San Diego with a pair of goals, while Kevin Devine, Norm Ferguson, Ray Adduono and Alec Tidey contributed singles. Scoring for Calgary were Butch Deadmarsh and Derek Haas.

At Denver, Bob Liddington's first two goals of the season helped the Spurs throttle the Oilers.

Keeping Lemmerman Warm Esk Worry

Times News Services

Edmonton Eskimos' immediate problem revolves about the team's quarterbacks. Montreal Alouettes are concerned about accommodation.

But whatever they do, say or think seems to be of national interest as "the big buildup" for Sunday's Grey Cup football game continues.

In Edmonton, coach Ray Jauch of the Eskimos announced he will employ the same roster — barring emergency — as the one which battered Saskatchewan Roughriders 30-18 in the Western Conference final.

TOM WILKINSON
. . . ready to go

But he isn't saying who will play quarterback, who will handle the punting or how his offensive and defensive lines will be formed.

Jauch's two quarterbacks, Bruce Lemmerman and Tom Wilkinson, say it doens't matter who starts as long as the Eskimos and their two-year Grey Cup drought. Lemmerman relived Wilkinson at the start of the last half Sunday and sparked the comeback victory over Saskatchewan.

Lemmerman spent several hours in hospital Monday for treatment of a circulatory problem in his throwing hand, but was back to participate in Tuesday's workout.

A blockage in Lemmerman's upper arm prevents an adequate supply of blood reaching three fingers in his right hand. The problem has been solved temporarily, but it's a situation that could dictate which quarterback will play against the Alouettes.

"If it's cold, he may not get good circulation," said Jauch. "We'll just have to get something to keep him warm."

Lemmerman insists he'll be ready to play.

The Esks were to leave for Calgary today.

Alouettes reached Calgary Tuesday and promptly ot ted to their hotel accomm tion.

"I'm not satisfied," running back Johnny Rodgers. "We like things a little plusher."

Montreal is lodged at a hotel far removed from the city centre but is close to McMahon Stadium, site of Sunday's game.

Last year in Vancouver, Alouettes switched hotels after staying one night in the original accommodation.

Montreal coach Marv Levy closed Tuesday's practice to the press but reported "we didn't do much" during the 55-minute workout.

Montreal will have one change in its roster. Dave Braggins, an offensive guard, suffered a broken jaw in Montreal's 20-10 win over Ottawa Rough Riders in last Saturday's Eastern Conference final. He was placed on the injury reserve list and was replaced on the 32-man roster by Frank Pomarico.

Meanwhile, a third team's lineup for the game was announced Tuesday.

Canadian Football League commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Bill Fry of Toronto will head the officiating team. He'll be joined by Harold Ferguson of Edmonton, Lorne Woods of Ottawa, Ross Perrier of Ottawa and Merv Pilling of Calgary. Jim Lysack of Regina is the backup official.

The game, of course, will be televised and broadcast nationally.

Whalers Charged

CANTON, Conn. (AP) — Three members of New England Whalers hockey team were arrested and charged with breach of peace early Tuesday following a scuffle in a bar.

Rick Ley, Ron Climie and Wayne Carleton of the World Hockey Association team were released on $250 bond each after charges were filed against them by an assistant manager of the bar, police said.

A fourth man, Richard Sutcliffe of Canada, was arrested with the players on the same charge and released on the same bond, police said.

Folio Resource Planning Spreading Throughout B.C.

After five years of evolution in the Prince George forest district, the folio system of integrated resource planning is beginning to spread rapidly throughout the rest of British Columbia.

So, sit up and take notice. This is a subject which should be of vital interest to all outdoorsmen. The manner in which we harvest our forest resources has a very direct bearing on the quality of fishing we can expect to find in our lakes, streams and coastal waters; the type and quality of hunting we can expect in the future; and the general level of experience we can expect to gain from any of the so-called non-consumptive outdoor pursuits.

Luckily, opportunities for public input have been provided at just about every level of the planning process. You or your club only has to make the effort to submit your views and anyone abdicating this responsibility has no right to complain later.

In recent columns, I've mentioned the folio system without elaboration but with the Royal Commission on Forest Resources still sitting in Vancouver, now might be an opportune time to present a little background information.

Bob Harding, who heads the folio section of newly-formed planning division of the B.C. forest service, seemed happy to fill in a few of the gaps in my own limited knowledge on the subject.

Bill Young, now the assistant chief forester in the forest service, established the folio system in 1970 while he was the district forester at Prince George. And word has it he's still one of the main ramrods in establishing the system on a provincewide basis.

Harding, too, has been in the picture from the beginning.

A folio is a set of maps, each covering a specific watershed or drainage system and including such things as recreational potential, fish and wildlife inventories, cut allowances, timber types, protection measures and perhaps most important of all, soil types. Each of the maps within a folio is paired with specific constraints which must be applied to sensitive areas.

"When you superimpose all the resource capabilities over each other there are areas that we feel are very fragile and critical . . . under present logging technology we feel we need an extra-hard look at them," explained Harding.

"Now we're getting to the point where we're identifying these areas and saying (to the logging company) either you can or can't log — and if you do log, this is how you're going to do it."

Each cutting layout plan submitted by the timber licencee must comform to all constraints imposed through unstable soil types or endangered populations of fish or wildlife.

"If it doesn't, we send it back to them," added Harding.

The whole system of resource planning in this province can be broken down into four basic stages.

First, there is the large-scale conceptual planning on a regional basis which is outside the hands of the forest service. Within a region, the forest service plans distinct management areas such as Public Sustained Yield Units (PSYUs) and establishes the volume of timber to be cut to supply the various mills. Folio systems are then worked out on a site-specific basis within these management units using input from a variety of government agencies like the fish and wildlife branch, water resources and federal fisheries. And last, the licencee plans his logging operation within the framework established by the folio.

Public input is solicited during the last three phases.

"In a few words, we establish land-use priority," said Harding. "For example, if the area is best suited for timber — that's the approach to take. If it is best suited for wildlife — then that's number-one priority and the other resources have to dovetail in or they don't go in at all."

Harding maintains that folios should be updated "whenever the resource agency feels they should be updated."

Fish and wildlife, for example, will probably want to update their sections quite regularly once they obtain the manpower and money to put more legs in the field.

The forest service must also feel a pinch on budgeting.

"It's unfortunate that the demand for a data base increases with time while our capability to pay for the collection of it varies," Harding pointed out.

A total of 469 folios are on the go within the province and only 35 have been approved. Prince George, naturally, has the most at 155 while Nelson has 117, Vancouver 64, Prince Rupert 64, Caribou 41 and Kamloops 28. With the exception of Prince George, most have been started since the planning division was established in June of this year.

During next summer, the division will co-ordinate a monitoring program to check out areas where they've done folios and operations have subsequently been carried out. Depending on what they find, the planning process can be refined further.

With a view to keeping the public more informed, the forest service is now providing interested groups and individuals with specific yearly reports for some of the more critical PSYU's instead of lumping everything into a province-wide annual report.

"Hopefully, this is going to keep the people who are involved in touch with what is actually happening. They had a say in what they think should happen and now we have to follow up on it with their interest in mind," explained Harding.

Approval of the final harvesting plan anywhere in the province now requires the joint signing of the district forester and the regional director of the fish and wildlife branch. Plans are afoot to get water rights into the picture, too.

All I can say is, we've come a long way in the past few years.

So use the opportunities provided!

Morgan Landslide Winner

JOE MORGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Morgan, sparkplug second baseman of Cincinnati's Reds' world champions, was named the National League's Most Valuable Player Tuesday by the Baseball Writers Association of America, winning by the largest margin in the history of the award.

Morgan received 21½ of the 24 first-place votes cast by a special writers' committee and totalled 321½ points, beating runner-up Greg Luzinski, slugging outfielder of Philadelphia Phillies, by a whopping 167½ points. It was the largest plurality for any MVP in either league since the writers began handing out the awards in 1931.

Two full first-place votes went to Morgan's Cincinnati teammate, third baseman Pete Rose, winner of the 1973 MVP award and one voter, Bob Hertzel of the Cincinnati Enquirer, split his ballot between the two Reds.

Luzinski had 154 points to finish second with Pittsburgh Pirates' Dave Parker third with 120 points. Cincinnati teammates Johnny Bench, the winner of this award in 1970 and 1972, and Rose finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

They were followed by catcher Ted Simmons of St. Louis Cardinals and first baseman Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh, as non-pitchers swept the first seven spots in the voting which was conducted before the league playoffs and World Series.

The next three places belonged to pitchers. Reliever Al Hrabosky of St. Louis finished eighth followed by Cy Young Award winner Tom Seaver of New York Mets and Randy Jones of San Diego Padres, the Cy Young runner-up.

Morgan — the first black to win the National League MVP since 1969 — was the only player listed on all 24 ballots. In addition to his first-place support, he received two third-place votes. His point total was the second highest ever.

Last year's winner, first baseman Steve Garvey of Los Angeles Dodgers, finished 11th in the 1975 balloting.

Morgan's margin of victory broke the plurality record of 160 points set by Stan Musial of St. Louis when he won the 1946 award over Dixie Walker of the old Brooklyn Dodgers.

Morgan earned the award with a .327 batting average, fourth highest in the National League. He also led the league in walks with 132 and was on base with hits and walks 295 times. He scored 107 runs and led all second basemen in fielding, making only 11 errors.

Oil Kings Win for New Owners

A major change in Edmonton was reflected on the Western Canada Hockey League scoreboard Tuesday.

A group headed by former coaches Brian Shaw and Ken Hodge has taken over control of Edmonton Oil King. Hodge replaced Doug Messier as coach and the Oil Kings responded Tuesday with well-deserved 6-4 victory over the Eastern Division-leading Saskatoon Blades.

It was only the fifth win in 18 games for the one-time powerhouse.

In another game Tuesday, Kamloops Chiefs ran their undefeated road record to a fourth game by defeating Brandon Wheat Kings 6-4.

Joining Shaw and Hodge in the Oil Kings' purchase were lawyer Pat Shewchuk, restauranteur Vic Mah and Mel Rosichuk, a bus-line operator. They paid more than $150,000 to World Hockey Enterprises, which also operates Edmonton Oilers of the World Association.

But the price, said Oilers' manager Bill Hunter, was only a minor factor. Sale of the Oil Kings will allow the professional team's executives to concentrate "time and effort" towards establishing the Oilers' franchise.

All members of the new group will become active in Oil King affairs.

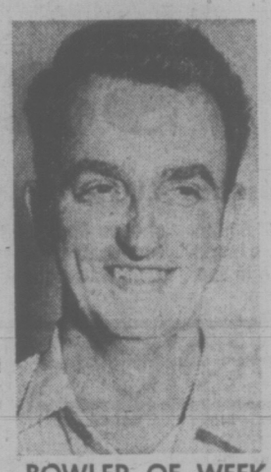
Shaw, who coached Oil Kings from 1971 until 1973, becomes general manager. Mah was named club president, Shewchuk is a vice-president and Rosiechuk becomes secretary-treasurer.

Messier will return to coach Spruce Grove Mets of the Alberta Junior League, a team he directed to the Canadain tier two championship last spring. Sam Belcourt has resigned as Spruce Grove coach.

While the change and Tuesday's result may indicate better days ahead for Edmonton, Winnipeg Clubs suffered another jolt.

Gord Blumenschein, Winnipeg's leading scorer with 16 goals and 24 assists, will be sidelined for at least two weeks because of bone chips on his right knee.

The Clubs also have done some juggling in recent days in an effort to snap a seven-game winless streak. Forward Grant Eakin was traded to Lethbridge Broncos for Dwayne Endicott and Clubs' coach George Dorman replaced Paul Howes with Warren Skorodenski as backup goalie to Lorne Molleken.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong finish helped Bob Willis to Bowler-of-the-Week honors in seventh week of Times-sponsored competition. Willis bowled 165-223-249—637 series in Wednesday Men's League at Duncan Bowling Centre to top men's tenpin division. He becomes seventh qualifier for next spring's Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Lift Marks Set

ARKHANGELSK, Soviet Union (AFP) — Vasily Alexeyev, Soviet Olympic champion, shattered two of his own world super-heavyweight weightlifting records, bettering his clean-and-jerk mark with a lift of 542.5 pounds and the combined snatch and clean-and-jerk record with a lift of 948 pounds.

Mt. Doug Favored In Swim

Mt. Douglas, which recently took the title away from Belmont-Fisher in the Greater Victoria meet, is favored to add the Vancouver Island swimming crown to its trophy case during the championship meet Thursday at Crystal Pool.

All Victoria high schools are entered along with some of the junior highs. In addition, some up-Island competition will be arriving from Cowichan High School in Duncan and Max Cameron High School in Powell River.

Heats begin at 9 a.m. and finals are scheduled to get underway at 6 p.m.

PATTERSON PACES BRAVES

Brent Patterson fired three goals Tuesday night to help Saanich Braves to a 7-2 victory over Fuller Lake Flyers in a South Island Junion "B" Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

The win moved Braves four points ahead of runner-up Esquimalt Legion.

Wayne Larsen added two goals to the Saanich total while singles went to Ron Jobson and Bill Adkin.

Grant Easterbrook and Doug Lafleur connected for the Flyers, who trailed 4-0 after the first period and 6-1 after the second.

Ken Stanton blocked 44 shots on the Fuller Lake net while Doug Hanna made 19 saves for Saanich.

Court to Hear Smithers Case

TORONTO (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada will hear an appeal against the manslaughter conviction of hockey play Paul Smithers, but not before next year.

Toronto lawyer William McMurtry, who is handling the case which resulted from a hockey-related fight in nearby Mississauga, said Tuesday that he will have more than 1000 pages of evidence to offer when the case is heard.

Smithers was convicted as the result of the death of Barrie Cobby after a midget hockey game in February, 1973. Smithers, 16, and Cobby, 17, were involved in a fight after the game and Cobby died, asphyxiated by his own vomit.

The Ontario Court of Appeal dismissed an appeal on a 2-1 vote on May 6, 1975.

County Court Judge B. B. Shapiro sentenced Smithers to six months in prison and two years' probation at the original trial. Smithers has been out on bail since that time.

RECALL ROOKIE

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League have recalled rookie Tim Young from their New Haven farm club and sent down Blake Dunlop. Young, 20, had eight goals and 13 assists in 13 games at New Haven.

Hockey Star, 14, Draws Suspension

TORONTO (CP) — Wayne Gretzky, the 14-year-old hockey prodigy who left Brantford, Ont., in order to play in Toronto, has been suspended indefinitely by the Ontario Minor Hockey Association.

But the young scoring sensation will be allowed to continue playing with Vaughan Nationals of the Ontario Hockey Association Metro Junior B series at least until early December.

The OHA has an agreement with the OMHA under which the two hockey bodies honor each other's suspensions. But Cliff Phillips of Newmarket, president of the OHA, says a decision on whether to go along with the OMHA's suspension must await an OHA executive meeting Dec. 5.

Jim Kinkley of Toronto, president of the OMHA, said Gretzky had been suspended "because, in our opinion, the transfer was not a proper one."

Gretzky attracted considerable attention three years ago when in his novice season, he scored 333 goals and had 118 assists.

Familiar Faces with Soviets

OTTAWA (CP) — Many familiar Russian hockey players are coming to North America for an eight-game series against National Hockey League teams in December and January.

But most of them are on the Wings of Moscow squad including forwards Vyacheslav Anisin, Alexander Bodunov, Sergei Kotov and Sergei Kapustin, defencemen Yuri Shatalov, Viktor Kuznetsov, and Yuri Tyurin and goaltender Alexandere Sidelnikov.

In articles written by Vladiin, coach of the Soviet Union Press Agency, Boris Kulaghmir Pakhomov of the Novosti national team coach and the Wings, said both his team and the Red Army club would be reinforced for the series.

The Wings will get four players from the Spartak team, all veterans of the two Soviet series with the National Hockey League in 1972 and the World Hockey Association last year.

They are the towering leftwinger Alexander Yakushev, Vladimir Shadrin, Viktor Shalimov and Yuri Lyapkin. Also on the Wings will be Alexander Maltsev of Dynamo, another international veteran.

The Wings will meet Pittsburgh Penguins Dec. 29, Buffalo Sabres Jan. 4, Chicago Black Hawks Jan. 7 and New York Islanders Jan. 10.

The Soviet Red Army team, bolstered by defenceman Velery Vasiliev of Dynamo, play New York Rangers Dec. 28, Montreal Canadiens Dec. 31, Boston Bruins Jan. 8 and Philadelphia Flyers, the defending Stanley Cup champions Jan. 11.

The Red Army team features brothers Alexander and Vladimir Golikov and eight-year veteran Viktor Zhuchok, the team's top scorer.

Army coach Nikolai Epshtein rates Canadians as wonderful skaters and strong on the power play. To meet them is "a sort of test of the character, courage and fighting traits of any hockey player."

Kulaghin says both the Wings and the Red Army team have been disappointing in Soviet league play this year.

He said the series with the NHL teams will provide Soviet coaches with an excellent opportunity to evaluate their players prior to selection of the Soviet National team for the 1976 world championships.

Bowl Pairings Anger the Bear

Times News Services

The Alabama-Penn State Sugar Bowl match-up has been confirmed with Alabama coach Bear Bryant admitting he handpicked Penn State over the Big Eight runner-up.

And without mentioning them by name, Bryant levelled a blast at Nebraska coach Tom Osborne and Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, who had criticized him for bypassing their teams, both ranked above Penn State.

With the Alabama-Penn State pairing set for New Orleans' new Superdome and West Virginia accepting a bid to play North Carolina State in the Peach Bowl, only one berth remained open in the 11 major post-season college football games. The Tangerine Bowl needs an opponent for 16th-ranked Miami of Ohio.

Bryant said he recommended the Alabama-Penn State pairing.

"I recommended it and I want those young coaches out there to know it," Bryant replied to charges that fifth-ranked Alabama, 9-1, ducked second-ranked Nebraska, 10-0, and sixth-ranked Oklahoma, 9-1, in favor of 11th-ranked Penn State, 8-2. All have one game remaining.

"We have no apologies to make to anyone," Bryant said. "They are all fine people out there (the Big Eight), but it would take those young guys 15 or 20 years before they can wear their spurs regular. When I was a young coach I popped off, too. Let them go where they want to and to hell with 'em.

"All I can say about the Big Eight is that if they wanted us, why did they sign with the Orange Bowl? If they wanted us, why didn't they invite us to the Orange Bowl?"

The Big Eight champion begins a four-year tie-up with the Orange Bowl this season. This year's Orange Bowl will see the winner of this week's going against the loser of this week's Ohio State-Michigan game.

Other matchups:

Tangerine — Orlando, Dec. 20, Miami of Ohio vs. an unnamed opponent.

Liberty—Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 22, Southern California vs. Arkansas, unless the Razorbacks win the Southwest Conference, in that case, Texas A and M goes.

Fiesta — Tempe, Ariz., Dec. 26, the winner of the Nov. 29 Arizona-Arizona state game is the host team. Bowl officials have invited the loser of this week's Nebraska-Oklahoma game as the opponent.

Oklahoma said if it loses to Nebraska, it will go. Nebraska has not yet responded.

Sun—El Paso, Dec. 26, Pitt vs. the winner of the Kansas-Missouri game.

Astro-Bluebonnet — Houston, Dec. 27, Colorado vs. the loser of the Nov. 28 Texas-Texas A and M game.

Gator — Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 29, Florida vs. Maryland.

Cotton—Dallas, Jan. 1, Georgia vs. Southwest Conference winner—Texas, Texas A and M or Arkansas.

Rose—Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1, the winner of this week's Ohio State-Michigan game against the winner of the Pacific-Eight conference, either UCLA, Stanford or California. UCLA can win the conference by defeating Southern Cal in two weeks.

Basketball's Mr. Positive Speaks Out

jim crerar

High school basketball's Mr. Positive is back in his usual haunt, the Oak Bay gym, which means the Bays will probably be first in line at the trophy table next spring.

Don Horwood isn't the least bit backward about calling it as he sees it — a refreshing approach among coaches — and the way he sees it again is a winning season.

In fact, he sees an even stronger team than last year despite the loss of Larry Dalziel, Steve Pescod, Dennis Trumpy, Scott Noble and Chris McMahan. Bays won the city and Island championship last year which means there's only one rung left on the ladder — the B.C. championship that eluded them.

He has Charlie Fisher, Dave Richmond, Mike Miller and Steve Leung back but lost returnee Mark Higgins for the year with an aggravated shoulder separation 10 days ago.

The rookie crop, however, is a bumper one. Among the newcomers are Mark's younger brother, Craig Higgins, along with Ken Kirzinger, Wayne Bryan, Rick Hatchman and Brent Cathcart.

Horwood's honesty in speaking out embraces more than predicting his team's fortunes. Some weeks ago, for example, he publicly criticized the University of Victoria for using part-time rather than on-staff coaches. That caused a furore in the press that needn't be resurrected here.

Of more interest, perhaps, is Horwood's views on athletic scholarships, expressed some time ago in a letter to the Ottawa-based Coaching Association of Canada.

Horwood favors them. In fact, he feels that Canadian universities who do not permit them are discriminating against student athletes.

DON HORWOOD
. . . aid to athletes

"There are lots of financial incentives for academic students," he argued, "and I feel the same financial incentives should be available to student athletes.

"Most universities have what's called a president's scholarship for the academics. Why can't there be president's scholarships for athletes?"

Then, answering his own question, he continued:

"I think universities feel their main function in society is academic but in this present society, where we're permitting the liberation of so many groups, the university's role has to change in terms of financial assistance."

In short, Horwood feels the academic-only approach is outdated.

"They're institutions of higher learning," he said, "and you can learn athletics as well as you can learn art or English or whatever."

But wouldn't there be the danger of turning universities into football factories?

"No more than we've turned them into doctor factories or teacher factories," Horwood replied. And in any case, he sees nothing wrong in an athlete using his abilities to get an education and then, if he's good enough, turning pro.

"In our North American society, it's quite valid to develop a person for professional sport," he said. "To tell me that a professional football player is not as important as a doctor or a janitor is to tell me that you're sitting in judgment. I don't feel I can sit in judgment on the importance of different professions."

In encouraging strict controls on aid to student athletes, the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union has said it does so in the belief that it is better to have students competing in sports because they want to, not out of financial pressure. Surely, this approach has merit.

"Isn't it the same for the academics?" Horwood asked. "A person who goes to university on, say, a physics scholarship studies physics because he wants to. He doesn't feel he has to because he accepted a scholarship.

"The same would apply to the athlete, or it should apply if we're living in a society where there's equal opportunity for everybody."

The fact is, many educators agree that there is nothing wrong with grants to student athletes. The problem is finding a way to police them.

How, for example, would you prevent a large, wealthy school from cornering the best athletes, thus making it impossible for newer, smaller schools to compete? Or how would you prevent a school from concentrating on one sport through its athletic scholarship fund, to the detriment of other sports?

You could, of course, draw up a set of rules, but could you trust everyone to observe them?

It's a problem the CIAU and college athletic directors have been at grips with for a long time in Canada, and it may be some time yet before they come up with a solution.

July 4 Fight For Ali?

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali's next fight appears headed for the Dominican Republic in January or February, followed by a "big-money" bout against Ken Norton July 4 in the United States.

Promoter Don King said in an interview Tuesday that Henry Clark would probably be Ali's next opponent and that Norton has replaced George Foreman as the leading candidate for Ali's next major heavyweight title defence as part of the U.S. bicentennial celebration in 1976.

"I'll tell you what I'm thinking about," said King, who has promoted Ali's last five fights. "I'm thinking Ali is going to fight Ken Norton on July 4. We're going to call it the Freedom Fight. We're going to put it in John F. Kennedy Stadium in Philadelphia. The second choice is RFK Stadium in Washington."

After stopping Joe Frazier in Manila last Oct. 1, Ali indicated his next major fight would be against Foreman.

But King said Tuesday: "Herbert (Ali's manager, Herbert Muhammad) is thoroughly disgusted with George Foreman.

"George won't even answer phone calls," added King. "He acts like he's still champion."

Investors Save Team

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — An investor in Virginia Squires said Tuesday the team's stockholders have raised enough money to carry the financially plagued team through the rest of the American Basketball Association season.

The investor said in an interview a minority group known as Norfolk Investment Co., Inc., run by black businessmen, had agreed to put up enough money to keep the team operating.

The investor disclosed the outcome of a meeting moments before a twice-delayed news conference to announce the fate of the Virginia franchise was scheduled to begin at the team's headquarters here.

The investor, who asked not to be named, said the stockholders now are "very optimistic" that attendance at Squires' home games will improve with the involvement of the black community in the team's survival.

Crowds at Virginia home games have been running about 90 per cent white, he said.

CLEAN HOUSE, FIRMS WARNED

WASHINGTON (WP) — Some two dozen U.S. corporations have admitted making questionable or illegal payments of more than $300 million in this country and overseas during recent years, according to a new study by the Library of Congress.

The study, which records only those payments publicly admitted since Jan. 1, was issued at the same time that a research organization for large investors warned that the business community itself must cope with the problem.

The Investor Responsibility Research Centre said action by the government to end widespread bribery and political payoffs would be unenforceable and that if the business community doesn't act on its own, investors will lose faith in the integrity of major American corporations.

The centre said insurance firms, pension funds and investment companies may want to consider disposing of stocks or bonds sold by corporations that don't take action to counter illegal payments.

Included in the Library of Congress study, requested by Rep. Les Aspin (D—Wis.), were illegal fees to overseas agents, bribes, kickbacks, political contributions and laundering.

Booze Recall

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Hundreds of thousands of bottles of liquor, wine and beer have been recalled during the past three years for problems including underfilling, mislabelling and asbestos contamination, the Treasury Department told Congress today.

None of the recalls was made public at the time.

While most involved distilled spirits, there is every reason to believe the beer and wine industries have the same problems. But there is no way of knowing because breweries and wineries are seldom if ever inspected, the bureau of alcohol, tobacco and firearms said.

FBI Letters Hit Below the Belt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI tried to disrupt the Ku Klux Klan, the Black movement and other groups by instructing agents to write anonymous letters falsely accusing members of the groups of marital infidelity.

FBI memos, made public at a senate hearing Tuesday, offered samples.

One such letter, with deliberate misspellings, was addressed to the white husband of a white woman active in a black organization.

It asked, "I guess your old lady doesn't get enough at home or she wouldn't be shucking and jiving with our black men in action, you dig? Like all she wants to integrate is the bed room and us black sisters ain't gonna take no second best from our men."

Another memo noted with satisfaction that one such letter had broken up a marriage.

A fabricated letter from "a black liberator" to a "sister" read in part:

"I only been in the organisation two months but — been maken it here with sister — and sister — and then he gives us this jive bout their better in bed then you and how he keeps you off his back by senden you a little dough ever now an then . . . this aint rite and were sayen that — is treaten you wrong."

The documents also showed a letter, claimed to be signed by "a God-fearing Klanswoman," that was sent to the wife of a klan member.

It said her husband "has been committing adultery . . . I saw her with my own eyes. They call her ruby." The letter went on to say, "I know this. I saw her strut around at a rally with her lust filled eyes and smart aleck figure."

Anonymous letters were also directed at members of the New Left.

According to one memo, "these letters should set out their activities and should be sent to their parents, neighbors and the parents' employers. This could have the effect of forcing the parents to take action."

. . . An Informer Spills Beans

WASHINGTON (WP) — A New Jersey contractor told the House of Representatives Intelligence Committee Tuesday how — as an FBI provocateur — he led a group of 30 anti-war activists in an ambush raid on the Camden draft board where federal agents were waiting to make arrests.

Robert Hardy, a husky four-year Marine Corps veteran, said he became an FBI informant in June, 1971, after learning of plans by local war critics to stage a protest at the draft board building.

Hardy said he infiltrated the group of "college professors, clergy and students" on instructions from the FBI after informing the local bureau office of what he had learned.

Eventually he took over the leadership of the protest group "to the point that it became absurd," he testified.

The witness, who now deplores his role as an FBI informant, said he provided the dissenters with ropes, ladders, drills, bits, hammers and moral encouragement.

"Mr. Chairman you could not believe what an inept band of bungling burglars these people were," Hardy told chairman Otis Pike.

He described them as a "loosely-knit group . . . dreamers who talked a lot but did nothing."

Most of the raiders, said Hardy, "couldn't even tie a knot properly. I taught them everything they knew . . . How to cut glass and open windows without making any noise . . . How to open file cabinets without a key . . . How to climb ladders easily and to walk on the edge of the roof without falling."

"My neighbors began to wonder why I have this crowd of people climbing up the side of my house and parading along the edge of my roof every day," Hardy related. "I began to feel like the Pied Piper."

He said he finally covinced the group to break into the draft borad building on the morning of Aug. 22, 1971.

"The rest is history," Hardy said. "In the early hours of Aug. 22 a group of young people were caught and arrested for breaking into the Camden draft board . . . The FBI, again, had gotten its man."

Vents Were Open In Laker Tragedy

CLEVELAND (AP) — Preliminary reports show that the ore carrier Edmund Fitzgerlad suffered a broken security railing and was taking on water through open vents just before going down last week in Lake Superior.

Capt. Adam Zaminski of the U.S. Coast Guard's travel inspection staff in Washington told a board of inquiry Tuesday the reports came from communications between the Fitzgerald and a nearby vessel, the Arthur M. Anderson.

The 729-foot Fitzgerald and all 29 crew members were lost Nov. 10 during a violent storm

The board also heard from a coast guard researcher who said preliminary results of a sonar scan of the lake bottom showed two 300-foot-long, ship-like objects lying in the area where the Fitzgerald was believed lost.

Dr. Lloyd Breslau of the coast guard's research and development centre at Groton, Conn., said the scan also appeared to show roughness, which could be spilled cargo.

A SEMINAR ON VISION, VISUAL PERCEPTION and
PERCEPTUAL MOTOR DEVELOPMENT

VANCOUVER Saturday, Nov. 22 Sheraton Villa Inn 4331 Dominion
VICTORIA Monday, Nov. 24 Red Lion Motor Inn 3366 Douglas Street

MORNING 8-9 Registration 9-12 Seminar
12-1:15 LUNCH Participants will secure their own lunch.
AFTERNOON 1:15-4 Seminar 4-5 Question and Answer Period

The seminar will be conducted by Mr. Frank A. Belgau, B.S., M.ED., formerly Director of Perceptual Motor Therapy at the University of Houston College of Optometry.

BOOKS and MATERIALS

Because Perception Development Research Associates publishes and manufactures perception development systems and materials, it is possible to present this seminar, and at the same time, AT NO ADDITIONAL COST, TO PROVIDE THE PARTICIPANTS WITH THE FOLLOWING BOOKS AND MATERIALS.

1 A PERCEPTUAL MOTOR AND VISUAL PERCEPTION HANDBOOK OF DEVELOPMENTAL ACTIVITIES FOR SCHOOLS, CLINICS, PARENTS AND PRE-SCHOOL PROGRAMS. COPYRIGHT 1971. (CATALOGUE PRICE $4.95)
2 THE VISUAL MOTOR CONTROL BAT AND SUSPENDABLE BALL (Catalogue Price $7.95)
3 CASSETTE TAPE OF SUSPENDABLE BALL ACTIVITIES — Visual Motor and Visual Training Activities. (Catalogue Price $5.95)
4 CASSETTE TAPE — A MULTI-SENSORY PROGRAMMED LEARNING SYSTEM DEMONSTRATION — Includes cassette tape, explanatory handbook and worksheets. (Catalogue Price $7.95)

Theoretical understanding and practical application are both necessary to a successful remedial or developmental program. Those who attend this seminar will go back to their schools with basic materials to use in applying the ideas and concepts they have gained.

The $25.00 fee is for the seminar. However, since the materials are included, schools can budget this item either as equipment cost or seminar fee.

PRE-REGISTRATION
Phone (206) 452-2842

Pre-registration is not necessary, but pre-registration does make it possible for you to receive your materials at the seminar. Also, if you pre-register, our artist can letter your certificate and you can receive it at the end of the seminar.

An additional fee of $4.00 will be charged those who register at the door to cover packaging, handling and postage of certificate and materials.

Perception Development Research Associates realizes the importance to a child of having both his parents aware of his difficulties and involved in the solutions to those difficulties. For this reason we encourage both parents to attend the seminar for $25.00, the price of one registration. For obvious reasons this special price cannot be extended to professionals.

Neglected animals should be reported to police and those organizations involved with animal protection. The suffering of animals is somewhat increased in the colder months. Lack of shelter causes suffering and lack of sufficient food to keep the body alive and warm intensifies the torture.

People who have investigated many cases of animal abuse say that lack of experience, knowledge, and ability to handle, are the factors causing the neglect rather than simple indifference or deliberate inaction.

Few people who acquire horses or cattle for the first time have any idea how to feed and care for the animals. In many cases, these people seek advice, or receive it voluntarily, from people who are no more knowledgable but are trying to appear authoritative.

An example of neglect through ignorance came to attention a few years ago. A young couple bought an aged thoroughbred mare in late summer. Told that the mare lived outdoors all year long and was only fed a little hay in winter, the new owners took the mare home and placed her in a small acre fenced pasture. Intending to be generous in feeding, they purchased some very poor hay from a nearby dairy farmer and twice a day fed the mare as much hay as could be held in both hands. This was about one tenth the amount of good green hay the mare needed to stay alive if shelter was provided.

An acquaintance of the couple, who was an experienced horseman, noticed the mare as he was passing. Advised of the need for correct feed and shelter for the mare, the couple realized they could not supply the care the mare needed. Inspection showed the animal was probably over 20 years old so instead of reselling her the mare was put to sleep, safe from further abuse.

Should animal mistreatment or neglect be noticed, an attempt should be made to get another witness and appeal to people with authority to correct the situation. If there is no response, the SPCA should be notified.

The SPCA will withhold your name if requested. Be sure to have correct location, time and date, and names if possible, of people involved in the mistreatment of animals.

In many cases it is very difficult for the SPCA to obtain sufficient evidence to prosecute and courts tend to be very lenient on any people facing cruelty chrages. The SPCA concentrates on removing the cause of a complaint rather than obtaining a conviction in many instances. It is your co-operation that will reduce the incidents of neglect and cruelty to animals.

Drenching rain and heavy ground conditions didn't dampen the enthusiasm of Metchosin Pony Club members who took part in the club's first One-Day Event, held recently at 5170 Rocky Point Road by kind permission of Mr. and Mrs. E. Clapham.

The event consisted of a five-minute dressage test; a two-phase endurance competition — a Roads and Tracks section for all competitors, with an additional Cross-Country course to be done at a gallop by entrants in the Open class; and finally stadium jumping for the English riders and a trail class for the Western group.

Mrs. Gay Brown, a Saanich-Victoria Pony Club instructor, was the judge.

Results in the three classes were:

Open — 1st, Helena Lindbom; 2nd, Isobel Springett; 3rd, Tina Neff; 4th, Linda Willson; 5th, Jennifer Tipton.

Green — 1st, Beatriz de la Rocha; 2nd, Katy Moss; 3rd, Mike Scott; 4th, Susan Young; 5th, Gloria Gomez.

Western — 1st, Charlaine Zeer; 2nd, Charles Turner; 3rd, Angela La Roche; 4th, Barbara Mendum; 5th, Jane Mendum.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old who stole a car just days after getting out of jail for car theft was sentenced in Victoria provincial court Tuesday to 10 more days.

Larry Donald Dunphy, no fixed address, was sentenced by Judge Harold Alder who said: "It doesn't say much for the corrections system."

He also put Dunphy on a year's probation.

Police arrested the youth Oct. 20 at 3 a.m. following the theft in Victoria the previous day.

Defence counsel Roger Cardinal told the court the youth has moved a great deal through the years. Dunphy doesn't like jail, he added, and had just spent 30 days there on a similar charge.

"I'd suggest if the accused doesn't like to be in jail he shouldn't have stolen a car as soon as he got out," said Prosecutor Scott Marshall.

A woman who misled police and caused another person to be charged with a criminal offence was fined $400 and ordered to do 40 hours' community work.

Perfidia, Louise Simpson, 23, of 235 Michigan, was sentenced by Judge Fred Green after she was involved in a hit-and-run accident Dec. 23, 1974, and later told police she had not been driving the car.

She was found guilty of committing mischief on Oct. 20.

"The courts will not tolerate persons who deliberately attempt to subvert the law and divert suspicion from herself," said Green.

Higher court trial on a charge of rape was ordered for Richard Ernest Nussle, 30, of 3209 Rutledge.

He is free on $2,000 surety bail following the charge that was laid following an Oct 19 incident involving an 18-year-old girl.

Holly Ann Townsend, 17, of 10377 McDonald Park Road, received a suspended sentence, two years' probation and an order for 24 hours' community work for theft.

She had pleaded guilty Oct. 28 to stealing $25.99 worth of clothing from Woolco.

Townsend also pleaded guilty Tuesday to theft of $74.64 worth of goods from Simpsons-Sears last Thursday.

Judge Alder fined her $70 on that charge.

Two men who breached probation by failing to attend impaired drivers' courses were each fined $50.

Allan Edward Goble, 24, of Cobble Hill; and Dennis L. Schaffer, 23, of 2091 Parkland, Sooke, had earlier convictions for impaired driving and been ordered to take the course.

"This unfortunately appears to be an increasing phenomenon, people not attending this course," said Prosecutor Nick Lang. "I'd suggest it be treated as a very serious offence."

Shane Wesley Wood, 19, of Victoria, was given a suspended sentence, six months' probation and an order to do eight hours' community work when he pleaded guilty to theft.

He and a companion had stolen four cases of soft drinks from a Goodwill Bottling truck Sept. 2.

Roland Joseph Laberge, 25, of 1042 Inverness, was fined $125 when he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Police arrested him after stopping his car on Douglas and smelling marijuana smoke.

He has a 1970 conviction for trafficking in narcotics.

Elizabeth Evelyn Keefe, 58, of 520 Rithet, was fined $200 when she pleaded guilty to theft.

She was put on a year's probation and ordered to do eight hours' community work after stealing $4.07 worth of goods from Woodwards on Oct. 23.

In traffic court, Robert Joseph Simon, 31, of 665 Harbinger, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and was fined $200.

WOES FOLLOW A BUMPER CROP

The owner of Saanich Peninsula's largest apple orchard says his apple crop is excellent this year but he can't sell it.

Robert McMurtry, who harvested 300 tons of apples this year from his 50-acre farm, said this year's crop was the finest he has seen in six years of apple growing here.

His yield, almost 30 per cent greater than last year, is not selling well.

Prices have slumped to the lowest in three years because of the extra production — a 20-pound case fetches $3.50.

McMurtry sells many of his apples to Woodward's and Canada Safeway stores, and some at his Saanich Orchards, off Stelly's. Prices at the farm start at $2 for 20 pounds of windfalls.

Labor is another headache, McMurtry said. More than 40 tons of apples have already been lost since pickers refuse to go out into the orchards in the rain.

Glass Replaces Teeth, Bones

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Larry Hench of the University of Florida is experimenting with glass to replace diseased or shattered bones.

On the basis of laboratory tests on animals, he says it is conceivable that large portions of the human body may someday be "more ceramic than man."

Bioglass is the first imitation substance scientists have found that bonds with living bone, says Hench.

Working with two colleagues, he devised the idea six years ago because of amputations suffered by Vietnam veterans with irreparably shattered bones.

In the last two years, animals have been fitted with imitation bone parts, teeth, jawbones and hip bones made of bioglass.

If experiments with animals continue to produce good results, Hench said, the ceramic substitute may someday save arms and legs mangled in car wrecks or fractured and wracked by cancer. Human implants of bioglass are at least two years away, he predicts.

Good results have been noted in tests where baboons were given bioglass teeth, implanted into sockets where natural teeth had grown, Hench said. Findings showed the bioglass teeth bonded firmly to hte jawbone within months of the implant and without damaging gum tissue.

The chief ingredient of bioglass is the same as ordinary window glass — a quartz sand called silica. Added to it are sodium oxide, calcium and phosphorous, which Hench said are released from the glass like tiny time pills as the living bone absorbs and merges with the imitation.

Researchers say bioglass is too weak to hold up in load-bearing parts of the body such as the bones of the leg. So they tried coating stainless steel and aluminum oxide with bioglass.

Hench said hip joints made this way were successfully implanted in monkeys and sheep.

Okinawa Halts Field Space For B-52s

NAHA, Japan (AP) — Okinawa's prefectural assembly has unanimously adopted a resolution opposing the stationing of U.S. B-52 bombers on the island. The resolution was in reaction to the arrival of 15 of the big bombers from Guam early this month. The U.S. Air Force said the planes were seeking shelter from a typhoon. But Okinawans believed the bombers' arrival was a demonstration of U.S. determination tto defend South Korea from Communist attack.

PESTS CUT FOOD CROP

LONDON (Reuter) — Insects, animal pests, diseases and weeds destroy no less than a half of all the food grown in the world, a British scientist said Monday.

In Britain, nearly a third of the crops are wiped out by vermin and disease, said Professor Leonard Broadbent of Bath University's School of Biological Sciences.

But in tropical countries, where the climate favors man's competitors and agriculture is less well developed, food losses total over two-thirds.

"In the world as a whole, crop losses from pests and diseases alone equal the value of the world grain harvest plus the world potato harvest," he said.

"This would not matter much, apart from the wasted effort, if the population were stable and well-fed. But some 500 million people are seriously underfed, and 1.5 billion inadequately fed — and the world's population is expected to double during the next 25 years."

Lamb Shoulders Offer Bargains

TINY BENNETT

My family are all great lovers of lamb, so when I spotted New Zealand frozen shoulders of baby lamb in my butcher's store at 89 cents a pound, I bought a pile for the freezer.

In my opinion, shoulder of lamb is far tastier than the leg, or even the rack, yet because it is such a difficult piece of meat it always sells for considerably less.

From time to time, boned, rolled and defatted lamb shoulders come into the stores but average around $1.50 a pound. I can bone and roll shoulders myself, but it's a job that I wouldn't wish on anybody.

So in the past I have usually reserved lamb shoulders for cutting into chunks for all the many delicious dishes in classical cuisines.

Then one day in my butcher's I asked if he would cut up my lamb shoulder into one-inch-thick slices on his power saw and I ended up with fine steaks that could be broiled, fried, baked or simply cut into hunks for say a cassolet, Turkish kebobs or Greek country-style stew. And at 89 cents a pound that's a great bargain, around half the price of true lamb chops.

So for some months now I've been broiling these big lamb slices, with the funny shaped bones, until they are crusty brown on both sides. I then pour in a hefty slug of red wine and finish them off in a closed oven set at 400 for about 15 to 20 minutes.

Recently I busted two ribs and when I crawled out of bed to get the dinner, it hurt so much that I took an easier route than my usual broil-bake recipe and came up with a gloriously new way to cook my special lamb shoulders.

It wasn't until I stood barefoot in the kitchen looking at the defronted, sliced lamb shoulder standing up and holding its shape on a plate, that it occurred to me it should roast well.

So that's what I did.

TINY'S ROASTED SLICED LAMB SHOULDER

I set the meat in its original shape in a foil-lined roasting pan, with a length of string tied loosely around to ensure that it didn't fall apart.

This placed the outer fat layer on top and allowed for self-roasting. After wiping the entire upper surface with cut cloves of fresh garlic, I ground black pepper all over, followed by a dusting of powdered thyme, dried oregano and a faint coloring of mild paprika. And into the oven it went at the 350 setting for slow cooking for two hours.

Some people start lamb at 400 and lower after 20 minutes to 375 for a shorter cooking time but I disagree both to this method and to the pungent odor this higher level of heat produces.

This baby lamb is very tender and with the fat on top, it self-bastes and stays succulent. Since the smell of swiftly roasted lamb clings to everything in the house for days, I strongly recommend a slow oven.

Once the meat was set, I crawled back into bed and my wife cooked cauliflower and small potatoes poached in their skins with mint and finished off over low heat with a knob of butter.

It made a delicious and quite different lamb dish.

Because the bones in each slice are difficult to work out we put out lots of paper napkins and finished all the juicy hidden nuggets of tender lamb, finger-food style.

The next time I cook this dish, and that will be soon, I shall pour in a cup of red wine after the first 30 minutes of roasting and use the mingled juices and wine as a flour-thickened gravy.

At less than $1 a pound for a 3½ pound baby lamb shoulder, the cost of the meat came to 62 cents a serving. It served five adults generously.

Such shoulders, sliced in the manner suggested, are perfect for hunking for curries.

For a really magnificent Irish stew, the slices can be trimmed of fat and then cooked whole with the other ingredients. The bones will add flavor and goodness to the whole. This cut is far superior to the usual over-fat stewing lamb and at 89 cents is not that much more expensive.

Promise of Pecan Supply Prompts Repeat of Recipe

By MARY MOORE

Flattery will get you somewhere.

A reader said if I did not repeat my Dark Blond Florida Fruit Cake I would disappoint a lot of her friends. This cake calls for four cups of whole pecans which is one pound.

I heard from an independent dealer that he was expecting a shipment of small pecans from Turkey that he was hoping to retail at 99c per pound.

This inside news encouraged me to repeat the Dark Blond Florida Fruit Cake for it one dealer expects this supply of pecans it is reasonable to assume they will be available in many parts of Canada.

I hope so.

DARK BLOND FLORIDA FRUIT CAKE
(Repeated from December, 1970)

½ lb. butter (no substitute)
1 c. granulated sugar
5 large eggs
1¾ c. unsifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¾ lb. sliced glace cherries (mixed green and red)
1 lb. candied pineapple (shred on ¼" shredder or chop finely)
4 c. whole or coarsely chopped pecans (buy one pound)
1 tbsp. vanilla
2 tbsp. lemon juice

Cream butter and sugar together until very light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat in each one as you add it, until smoothly blended. Sift the unsifted flour with the baking powder and salt. Mix ½ cup of this flour mixture through the prepared fruits and nuts which have been mixed together. Sprinkle remaining flour mixture over creamed mixture and stir until blended. Stir in vanilla and lemon juice. Add flour, fruits and nuts and stir well. Turn into two loaf pans (8½x4½x2¾") lined with three thicknesses of wax paper, brushing top sheet generously with butter. DO NOT PREHEAT OVEN. Put waterpan below cakes. (Three-quarters fill broiler pan with boiling water after it is in position in oven.) Turn on oven to 250 deg. Fahr. (to "bake" not "preheat" — which means only bottom burner is on). Bake about 4 hours or until top feels firm to touch. Cool in pans on cake rack. This cake is moist enough that it slices perfectly within 24 hours. It freezes well.

Turkey Tetrazzini

(Could substitute chicken)

1 lb. spaghetti
¼ c. butter or margarine
1 c. finely chopped celery (including a few tender leaves)
1 medium Spanish onion chopped
1 green pepper chopped
½ lb. muchrooms scrubbed and sliced
¼ c. flour
2 tsp. salt
2 c. milk
½ lb. (2 c.) shredded old Cheddar cheese
2 c. (packed) coarsely cut up cooked turkey meat (or chicken)
¼ c. sherry
2 or 3 tbsp. chopped canned pimiento

In a large pan melt the butter or margarine and add the celery, onion and green pepper and GENTLY saute covered for 15 minutes. Add the prepared mushrooms and cook slowly 5 minutes longer. Sprinkle flour and salt over and stir in. Stir in milk until thick. Stir in cheese then turkey, sherry and pimiento.

(If this is prepared in advance of Grey Cup day it can now be cooled and chilled or frozen well covered. It will then have to be reheated at Grey Cup party time.)

Serve over generous amount of spaghetti cooked in large amount of boiling salted water at least 20 minutes — until very tender. Drain through colander.

NOTE: If this Turkey Tetrazzini is frozen you may want to add 1 cup milk when reheating as it thickens on standing and this addtion would stretch it a little.

Turkey Tetrazzini would be excellent on your New Year Eve buffet.

Patients Let Out

EDMONTON (CP) — Mental patients will be allowed leaves of absence under supervision under a bill introduced in the Alberta legislature.

Dr. Winston Backus (PC—Grande Prairie) said in introducing the Mental Health Amendment Act 1975 that the bill clarified the Mental Health Act.

"It also introduces recommendations of the provincial mental health advisory board council concerning appeal procedures and enabling formal mental patients to have leaves of absence under supervision . . . and to enable the public trustee to cancel certificates of incapacity when the person certified can not be found."

The bill was given first reading.

STEWED GREEN TOMATOES
(Serves 4)

2 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. chopped green onion (or 23 tbsp. chopped chives)
2 cups washed, cored and sliced green tomatoes
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
½ tsp. curry powder
1 tsp. sugar
2 tbsp. chopped parsley

In a medium-large frying pan gently melt butter and add chopped onions (or chives). Shake pan over low heat to wilt them. Add green tomato slices in not more than two layers. Mix together in a cup the salt, paprika, curry powder and sugar and sprinkle evenly over top. Cover and simmer until barely tender without disturbing the seasonings. Sprinkle parsley over top, cover and simmer gently one minute. Slide carefully from pan onto preheated shallow serving dish so that all pretty topping stays in place. Serve hot with fish or meat cakes or any meat of your choice and a yellow vegetable such as mashed squash.

CASSEROLE
and onions

To serve, select 4 medium-large green tomatoes. Wash and remove core. Slice ¼" thick into buttered casserole. Between layers arrange one thinly sliced large mild Spanish onion. Sprinkle layers generously with salt and a little pepper. Dot top with 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. Cover and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 1 or 1¼ hours or until onions are very tender. Lovely with beef in any form.

Vitamin K a Must For Proper Clotting

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By DR. JEAN MAYER

Q. Could you please discuss the role of vitamin K in human nutrition?

A. Vitamin K is essential for the proper clotting of blood. It apparently acts by regulating the synthesis of certain proteins that are necessary for coagulation.

The vitamin was discovered in 1929 by a Danish researcher named Dam who observed a hemorrhagic disease in the chicks he was using to study cholesterol synthesis. He soon demonstrated that the condition was due to a deficiency of a previously unrecognized, fat-soluble substance in the diet that he named vitamin K for "koagulation." Eight years later, in 1937, vitamin K deficiency in humans was reported for the first time in medical history.

Although vitamin K deficiency can occur in individuals with malabsorptive disorders, the disease is quite rare among normal children and adults. In part, this is because much of the vitamin K we need is manufactured by microorganisms in the intestine. And a well-balanced diet easily supplies the rest. The vitamin is found in generous amounts in green, leafy vegetables and in moderate amounts in meat and dairy products. (Fruits and cereals contain very little.)

The only normal, healthy individuals who need a vitamin K supplement are newborn babies. Because the vitamin is not transmitted across the placenta terribly well, infants are born with short supplies. Moreover, when the child is born, its intestinal tract is sterile and has no bacteria to produce the necessary vitamin K.

For this reason, the Committee on Nutrition of the American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that newborn infants be given a single dose of vitamin K soon after birth.

Q. I have a 2-month-old son whom I am breast-feeding. As yet, he's gotten no solid food. With all the concern about heart disease these days, I'd like your opinion about how soon I should pay attention to the fat and cholesterol content of his diet.

A. On the basis of our present information, I do not feel that it is necessary to start worrying about cholesterol in infancy — unless your family has a history of very high cholesterol. In fact, the results of animal studies suggest that moderate amounts of dietary cholesterol may be desirable in infant's diets in order to stimulate the development of the mechanism to control cholesterol metabolism in later life.

Just when you need to begin a cholesterol-lowering diet is still a matter of debate. Although coronary heart disease doesn't show up until much later, available evidence suggests that the accumulation of fat and cholesterol in the arteries begins in middle or late childhood and continues throughout life.

Thus, at the present time, it certainly seems wise, indeed necessary, for the boys in the family, who are of course more coronary prone, to begin following a cholesterol-lowering diet when they reach adolescence. Whether there's any advantage in starting earlier, we just don't know. I might also point out that there's no evidence whatever that a cholesterol-lowering diet can in any way be harmful.

Q. Could you please evaluate brewer's yeast for me?

A. Dried brewer's yeast is an excellent source of many B vitamins and is particularly rich in thiafine. For this reason it has long been used as a dietary supplement in parts of the world where malnutrition is common. Although diets in this country generally contain adequate amounts of B vitamins, people like to take a tablespoonful of brewer's yeast fixed in some fruit juice as a dietary supplement. And while most people must get used to the taste, if you like it, fine!

More recently, yeast has begun to be considered for its potential as a protein supplement. Although it is somewhat low in essential amino acid methionine, it contains protein of quite a good quality. Moreover, because it contains plenty of lysine, the essential amino acid generally in short supply in cereal grains, it is a logical supplement to improve the quality of protein you are already consuming.

Because of this, much effort is currently being directed both toward developing methods to raise yeast and toward evaluating its effectiveness and safety as a food supplement for animals and man.

Many vegetarians use yeast as a protein supplement. And if you like the taste of it, fine. From an economic point of view, however, unless you've found a cheaper source than I have, it's no bargain.

Sask. Wet As Liquor Flows Again

REGINA (CP) — A strike by about 300 employees of the Saskatchewan Liquor Board, which began Oct. 3, has ended under the leadership of a recently appointed provincial mediator.

Rollie Fauchon, negotiator for the Saskatchewan government Employees Association, said terms of the agreement reached under arbitrator Williams would not be released until ratification meetings are held this weekend.

The strike caused liquor supplies in the province to dry up almost completely, with many beverages rooms closing down for lack of supplies.

Until Monday the liquor board had stuck by its offer of an eight-per-cent increase plus $88 a month for some employees, and eight per cent plus $94 a month for others.

The union had demanded an across-the board increase of $275 a month.

Fauchon said all employees will return to work today, with all outlets in the province expected to be open by 11 a.m.

Soviets Jail Woodsy Lovers

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A farmhand and a milkmaid who left their jobs and lived together in a wood near here have each been sentenced to a year in jail for refusing to take a job. The pair were charged with leading a parasitical way of life, the Soviet newspaper Leniskoye Znamya reported. Being without a job for any length of time is prohibited under Soviet law.

Time to Stock Up on Homemade Holiday Goodies

HILDA BEASTALL

November is a good time to bake extra batches of cookies and special breads and coffee cakes for drop-in visitors during the coming holiday season.

No longer is it considered desirable or necessary to squander a month's food budget money on making or buying elaborate fruit cakes and mince pies.

Much simpler home baking will be even more happily received as gifts and enjoyed by guests. Some recipes for this baking will follow in coming weeks. Today it is a festive pudding suited to today's needs of good values in small quan tities.

Puddnig is so deliciously light in texture as to be suitable for all but those on medically restricted diets. Made now and cooked, it can be stored until needed. The cost is surprisingly low.

This recipe has been changed in only minor details from the time I first used it in Victoria over 30 years ago.

The use of apples carrots and potatoes in a Christmas Pudding is not new but an old way of introducing flavor and light texture to a mixture of essentially heavy fruits — currants, raisins, dates, and candied peels if used. These dried fruits are reduced to a minimum in this recipe and so is sugar. Candied peel is not liked by so many people that it is best left out, but a little grated fresh lemon or orange peel may be acceptable. Soft margarine has been substituted for beef suet; please yourselves about this replacement.

BUDGET CHRISTMAS PUDDING

1 cup dark raisins
1 cup currants
1 cup chopped dates
½ cup brown sugar
1 cup grated raw apple
1 cup grated raw carrot
1 cup grated raw potato
¾ cup margarine, softened
1 beaten egg
1 lemon, grated rind and juice
1 Tbsp dark molasses
1 cup unbleached flour
¾ cup wholewheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
1 tsp salt
1 (scant) tsp baking soda
½ tsp mixed nutmeg, cinnamon, ginger

This recipe makes a total of 12 to 16 servings in 2 puddings.

Raisins, currants, dates and sugar are level measurements, no packing. Apple, carrot and potato are shaken down measurements.

Measure first four ingredients into large mixing bowl. Grate and measure apple, carrot and potato in succession, adding each lot to the other fruit and mixing at once to preserve color. Sprinkle with lemon juice as each kind is grated to help prevent losing vitamins.

Add lemon peel and molasses. Mix all thoroughly; Add, and blend in, softened margarine and beaten egg.

Into another bowl measure next the six dry ingredients. Mix with a fork.

Add to fruit mixture, blending well as you mix.

Spoon into two well greased pudding basins with rims. Leave one inch of space at top.

Cover top with heavy waxed paper, and tie down with a large square of strong cotton material like the old sugar or flour sack. Tie tightly with string beneath rim; then knot opposite ends of cloth on top.

An alternative way of putting the basin into a pan of boiling water to steam-cook would be to use the collapsible wire basket as is available for steam-cooking vegetables. It fits into almost any saucepan and probably will hold the size pudding basin you will be using. Try out the idea; the wire handles will be handy for lifting out the hot basin from the boiling water when cooking period is finished.

Steam each pudding in a large pan of boiling water for 2½ hours. Have level of boiling water below rim of basin. Keep it boiling throughout cooking period. The close fitting saucepan lid must not be raised except briefly to see that water level below rim is maintained. Add more boiling water at side of basin if needed.

These directions are given in detail for new homemakers who may not have experienced the art of steamed pudding delicacies.

The secret (and it should not be kept as a secret) is to keep the top of the pudding free of water, and to keep the lid on the saucepan during the period of boiling.

These two points prevent the soggy denseness of many Christmas puddings; even this recipe will likely turn out soggy if covered with water during cooking.

When cooking time is up, lift pudding from the still boiling water either by the knotted cloth ends or by the wire handles of the basket. Remove cloth covering and cool pudding thoroughly in the basin; then replace waxed paper with fresh paper before storing.

If no really cool cupboard available, keep pudding completely sealed on top with waxed paper, in refrigerator.

When required for serving, cover with cloth over the paper as before, or place directly into the wire basket and into the boiling water to boil for one hour from time the water returns to boiling. A little longer is better than too short a time.

Serve hot with warm lemon sauce, a thin not-too-sweet custard or a big spoonful of homemade yogurt as a digester.

LEMON SAUCE

1 Tbsp soft margarine
2 Tbsp lemon juice
¼ cup brown sugar
2 Tbsp cornstarch
1 cup water

In a small saucepan, mix margarine, juice and sugar. Dissolve cornstarch with water and stir into saucepan, cooking and stirring until thickened and smooth.

A variation in serving Christmas pudding is to put one batch into a set of ovenproof custard cups. Mould cooking foil over each cup top, and set the cups in a pan of boiling water in the oven for 1½ hours in a fairly hot 190 to 205 deg. C.

Cooked, these little puddings make delightful surprise gifts to those unlikely to make their own but would enjoy your kindness.

At home, portions of one of the large puddings can be pressed into custard cups for reheating and serving as individuals, each turned out on a small plate with its sauce poured over.

This recipe takes one hour to put together and to fill the two pudding basins; a little longer when filling custard cups.

If necessary the time can be divided: mix fruit and all moist ingredients (first 11 in list) in large bowl and leave (covered) overnight. Measure dry ingredients into another bowl and set aside.

Next day, blend the two mixtures together as directed. The 2½ hour boiling period should be arranged for when you are at home to check as needed.

Since they are not costly to make and are delicious to eat, have some family fun making these puddings during the next week or two.

. . . Knowing Your Place

NEAR WEBSTER, Mass (UPI) — The longest-titled lake in the world, Lake Chargogagogmanchaugagogchaubunagungamrug (it is known locally as Lake Webster), is named after an Indian expression: "You fish on your side, we fish on our side, nobody fishes in the middle."

CHRISTMAS FRUIT LOAF

(4½"x8½"x2¾")

½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup granulated or icing sugar (first amount)
2 eggs
1½ cups stirred but unsifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ cup milk
½ tsp. almond extract
½ cup mixed glace fruits
½ cup coarsely chopped almonds
2 tbsp. lemon juice
¼ cup sugar (second amount)

Into beater bowl measure the butter or margarine and the sugar. Beat until light. Beat in eggs, scraping down sides of beater bowl with rubber spatula and continue beating in eggs for a minute. While beaters are on "low" add flour, baking powder, salt, milk and almond extract and beat until blended. (This is a beautiful batter.) Lift beaters and fold in fruits and nuts.

If you are using a Pyrex loaf pan or plain metal pan be sure to double line it with wax paper, brushing top sheet with butter. If you are using teflon lined pan butter only. Push batter well into corners.

Bake on centre shelf of oven at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes. NOTE: If in pyrex pan after 30 minutes baking insert a cookie sheet under loaf to protect bottom from overbaking.

The loaf cracks on top but this is part of its charm for you now brush it with a glaze: As soon as loaf is removed from oven slowly brush it all over with a mixture of the lemon juice and sugar (second amount). Use it all. Cool in pan. Remove from pan and chill before slicing. If desired freezewrap and freeze.

Hot Dog Loaf

2 tbsp. butter or margarine
¼ c. finely chopped onion
½ c. red hamburger relish
½ c. chili sauce
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tbsp. brown sugar
Two 12 inch loaves Italian or French bread (or 1 large loaf)
One 8-oz. pkg. process cheese, shredded (or mild Cheddar)
10 wieners cut in half crosswise

Melt butter in a small saucepan and saute onion in it until tender, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and add relish, chili sauce, Worcestershire sauce and brown sugar.

Cut a 1-inch slice of bread from both ends of each loaf. Cut each loaf into 5 pieces (OR 10 pieces if large loaf), each piece being approximately 2 inches thick. Now slice each piece through the centre, ALMOST to the bottom to resemble sanwiches. Spread a heaping teaspoonful of the relish mixture between each. Sprinkle a heaping teaspoonful of grated cheese on top of relish mixture. Push 2 wiener halves into the cheese letting the uncut ends of wieners poke out. Spoon remaining relish evenly over and top with remaining cheese.

Use two large sheets of foil and assemble the sandwiches on the foil to resemble the original loaves. Wrap tightly in foil. Heat in a 400 deg. Fahr. oven for 25 minutes.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old bachelor. For the last year I've been going with a very pretty, 28-year-old school teacher. I have asked her to marry me, but she says she is not in any hurry to get married.

She told me that she has been taking birth control pills for the last four years "in case she gets raped."

We have never been intimate. Don't get me wrong. I'm no angel. I've tried, but she won't let me. She claims she is still a virgin. As far as I know, she doesn't date anyone else.

How do you figure this pill business? — Leary

DEAR LEARY: It's possible, of course. But I find it a little hard to swallow.

DEAR ABBY: With Christmas approaching, my in-laws have already started to buy presents for our son (their only grandchild), which presents a problem.

Even though they know that we bought him a small tricycle for his third birthday last month, they have already bought him a racing car and a fire truck to drive. In addition to that, they've bought him a sled, a desk and chair set, an elaborate aquarium and a cowboy outfit, complete with a wooden "horsey" to ride. And they are still buying!

We know they enjoy shopping for their only grandson, but showering him with presents creates problems. Our gifts and the gifts of the other grandparents who can't afford much will look like nothing. Also, our son will not be able to appreciate anything.

Abby, do we have the right to limit the amount of gifts my husband's parents give our child?

My husband says we shouldn't deprive them of this pleasure. I disagree. — Awaiting your word

DEAR AWAITING: I vote with you. If your parents want to indulge the child, suggest that they buy him one gift and start a savings account for him. The boy may not appreciate it now, but he will when it's time to go to college.

DEAR ABBY: When kids marry and have babies, and their marriage fail, they call on Grandma to look after their children while they work, date and so forth.

All Grandma gets for raising someone else's child is the remark, "My mother spoils my child, but what can I do?"

Most grandmothers, weary from having raised their own children, would appreciate a little peace and quiet in their later years, but they fall into the trap of having to raise their grandchildren, too.

Abby, please try to free the grandmothers!

Weary And Trapped

DEAR W AND T: Sorry, but every grandmother who wants to be "free" will have to free herself. When she is asked to look after her grandchildren and she doesn't really WANT to, she should say so.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In the 1955 World Championship match between the United States and England, there were 12 slam deals which had one point in common: should a defender's opening lead be an ace or should he shy away from leading that top card? In 9 of these 12 deals, the cashing of the ace enabled declarer to fulfill a slam contract which he otherwise could not have made. Here is one of those deals. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH

SOUTH
♠ A K 10 9 6 5 4 3
♦ 10 2
♣ 10 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♥	1 ♠	2 ♥
2 ♠	3 ♥	4 ♥	Pass
5 ♣	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
5 ♥	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

The above was the bidding sequence when the United States held the North-South cards. Sitting in the West seat was one of the world's greatest players, Terence Reece, of London. Although his partner had bid hearts twice, and he himself had supported hearts, his fingers didn't stray close to the ace of hearts for his opening lead. In his judgment, if the ace of hearts was cashable at trick one, it rated to be cashable later on. And further, in his opinion, East's double of North's five-club cue bid called for a club lead.

So West opened his top club, and that settled matters, for there was no way that declarer could now avoid losing a club and a heart.

When the deal was replayed with England holding the North-South cards, this was the bidding sequence:

The American defender opened the ace of hearts. Belatedly, at trick two, he shifted to a club, dummy's ace winning. Then came a spade to South's king, and this was followed by a diamond to dummy's ace. On the king of hearts South discarded his remaining diamond. He next ruffed a diamond, then re-entered dummy via a trump to ruff a third diamond lead. With both opponents following a suit to all three diamond leads, both of dummy's remaining diamonds were now winners. On one of them, South discarded his remaining club.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, Nov. 20

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Message, which may have gone astray, is retrieved — or duplicated. You have chance to rid yourself of unnecessary burden. Do it — and with a clear conscience. Finish rather than initiate project. Relative confides problem — and it is likely to be in area of illusion or delusion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who makes promises concerning money may be embarrassed. Know it and plan accordingly. You'll have to make your own contacts, opportunities. Cash flow of proposed partner or associate dries up — depend upon yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message; take initiative. One close to you may be seeing through light of wishful thinking. Know it and double check. Be positive of source material. You learn by sharing knowledge. Someone of importance does want you to succeed. You'll see!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Light touch now does better for you than any heavy-handed method or procedure. Accept social invitation. People you meet now could play significant roles in your life. Gemini, Sagittarius might be featured.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friend may be sincere but misinformed. Check details — don't delegate too many duties. Accent on desires, how to fulfill them. You will receive recognition from professional associate, superior. Be graciuious, diplomatic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain valid hint from Leo message. You will be given opportunity to prove a major contention. Confide in one who backed you in past. Get thoughts, ideas on paper. Be analytical. Take nothing for granted. A bit of extra investigation could unravel puzzle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): One who has performed special services may announce travel plans. Have alternatives at hand. Home base undergoes adjustment or change. Communication barrier can be removed if you persist. Family member will lend moral support.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have chance now to streamline procedures. Pisces, Virgo persons could figure prominently. Avoid extravagance. Steer clear of temptation to believe that more money necessarily means more quality. Pick and choose — insist on verification, reference — and sincerity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lie low — do more listening than asserting. You may be seeing through prism. Means images could be deceptive. Be especially cautious where legal matters are concerned. You're given additional responsibility — a relationship intensifies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have chance to obtain better display, distribution. Round out project. Put finishing touches on assignment. Reach beyond what appears to be a limitation. Aries, Libra appear on scene. Stand tall for principles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romantic involvement can be stimulating — but don't take yourself too seriously. Someone appears to want something from you — for nothing. Protect yourself in emotional clinches. Fresh approach may be a necessity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is a push-pull here — you are asked to make what could be considered an unusual choice. Key is to rise above the petty, to put jealously aside, to make yourself secure by being quiet within. You'll comprehend!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you understand people, how they react, respond and what they are likely to do as a group. This has been one of your most important years — featuring business, marriage, family, added responsibility, the comeback from emotional setbacks suffered last year. You are a sincere, dedicated, loyal person who tends to brood, to be somewhat selfish, fearful of trying something new, very loyal to family and determined to be "secure." Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life.

Cat Murders Bring Cash

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Federation of Shooting Sports, which offered a $250 reward for information leading to the conviction of the person who shot seven big cats at a game farm last weekend, has received numerous calls donating money.

"We have received about 20 calls donating money from $5 to $500 since we put up our reward yesterday morning," Dwight Hildebrand, secretary-treasurer of the federation, said Tuesday.

He said the federation has not yet decided whether to use the donations to increase the reward or set up a trust fund to help the game farm replace the dead cats — or both.

Hildebrand said the donations haven't been totalled and "we expect more donations."

Meanwhile, one more cat — a pregnant cougar due to have her third litter of kittens shortly — died Tuesday afternoon at the wildlife unlimited game farm at Seebe, 45 miles west of here.

Two Siberian tigers and a jaguar were found dead Saturday morning. A male cougar died Monday. Wounded but still alive are a female jaguar and a third tiger.

The cats were shot behind their cages with a .22-calibre pistol. Mickey Bailey, owner of the game farm, said the culprit "has to be a kook or a nut."

Kathleen Bailey, wife of the owner, said the cats — valued at about $10,000 — were uninsured.

"It is difficult ot get insurance for big cats," she said.

Hildebrand said this is the reason why the federation is considering to help set up a trust fund to help the Baileys to replace the dead animals.

RCMP said the gunman apparently cut through a barbed wire fence, climbed a nine-foot chain-link fence and passed a number of other animals to get at the cat compound.

MAGAZINE UNDER WRAPS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Robert Evans, manager of Canadian News Co., said Tuesday he will not distribute the December issue of Penthouse magazine in Winnipeg for fear of possible criminal charges.

Evans said he decided to withhold the 22,000 copies of the magazine — depicting sexually explicit photographs — after members of the Winnipeg police vice squad examined the issue late last week.

Evans said his action was influenced by charges laid against a Toronto agency for distributing the issue.

The issue has been banned in several Canadian cities.

Ethnic Cuisine That Cries Out For Wine, Laughter Side Dish

By WILLIAM RICE

WASHINGTON (WP) — When Tessie and Louie Shapiro moved from New York City to a Florida retirement, they left behind the family feasts she had prepared for many years.

As a member of a large Italian family, Tessie introduced her husband and his Jewish relatives to an ethnic cuisine she had learned from her mother and, in turn, was able to add bliwtzes, borscht and other dishes to her repertory.

The Italian dishes aren't intended for snacks or for an intimate dinner. Simple, solid fare, they cry out for an accompaniment of wine and laughter and are best in a quantity that requires several pairs of hands doing preparation in the kitchen.

"There's no call for that kind of meal in Florida," Mrs. Shapiro said recently, "unless someone comes to visit. My son and daughter don't eat them at home."

Having arrived in Washington for a weekend at the home of relatives, Tessie Shapiro sensed a crowd would gather and wasted no time settling into the kitchen to prepare for it. The food she made was basic, uncluttered by a plethora of ingredients, but each step was carefully regulated and final taste adjustments were made before any dish was submitted to the oven.

Three of the dishes Mrs. Shapiro cooked were treated with various amounts of a master, tomato-based sauce. All way be prepared ahead and refrigerated or frozen. From time to time, Mrs. Shapiro invoked her mother as she explained a short-cut or technique, thus tracing the inspiration of these recipes back to another century as well as to another country.

TOMATO SAUCE

2 large onions, chopped
2 or 3 cloves garlic, minced
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 cans (35 ounces) Italian plum tomatoes
2 cans (29 ounces) tomato sauce
3 cans (6 ounces) tomato paste
2 beef bouillon cubes (optional)
2 tablespoons salt or to taste
¼ teaspoon pepper or to taste
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ cup chopped parsley
1 cup dry red wine (optional)

Saute onions and garlic in oil until soft, add tomatoes, sauce, paste and 18 ounces (3 cans) of water, bouillon cubes, spices. Stir well and simmer 1 to 1½ hours. If sauce becomes too thick, thin with water. Add wine for final half hour.

Before cooking, to insure a smooth sauce, Mrs. Shapiro forces the tomatoes and their liquid through a sieve into the pot. She then heats the residue separately and is able to work it through the sieve easily.

EGGPLANT PARMESAN
(Serves 20 to 25)

3 large eggplants, washed and ends cut off
20 ounces bread crumbs (use Italian - flavored if desired)
1 cup all-purpose flour
Salt and pepper
6 eggs
1 cup mixed olive and salad oil (approximately)
Tomato sauce
1 pound mozzarella cheese
1½ cup grated parmesan cheese

Slice unpeeled eggplant into ⅓-inch rounds. Break eggs into a bowl. Season with salt and pepper and add enough water to fill ⅓ eggshell. Mix bread crumbs with flour, salt and pepper. Heat ¼ cup oil in a large skillet. Have several empty paper bags ready to drain cooked eggplant.

Dip several eggplant slices into egg mixture, then coat both sides with floured crumbs and transfer to skillet. Cook for about 1 minute on each side (until just golden), remove and drain on paper bags. Repeat until all eggplant has been cooked.

Coat bottoms of two oven casseroles (8-inch by 13-inch) with tomato sauce and arrange a layer of eggplant in both. Arrange thinly sliced mozzarella loosely over the eggplant, sprinkle on some parmesan and spoon on a light coating of sauce. Repeat until eggplant slices all are in place. Finish with generous amounts of sauce and cheeses.

Place casseroles in preheated 350-degree oven for 40 to 45 minutes, or until browned on top and bubbly. Serve from the casseroles. To freeze, cook for 30 minutes, let cool, cover tightly with foil and place in freezer. Reheat until bubbly 20 to 30 minutes.

(makes about 40)

Tomato sauce (approximately 3 to 4 cups)
The filling:
3 pounds ricotta cheese
1 pound Mozzarella cheese, cut into ½ inch cubes
4 large eggs
¾ cup chopped parsley
1 tablespoon salt or to taste
½ teaspoon pepper or to taste
Mix filling ingredients together well. Store in a cool place until ready to use. Filling left over from Manicotti may be used later for lasagna.
The shells:
4 cups flour
4 cups water
6 eggs
1 tablespoon salt
Salad oil as needed

Stir egg, then water and salt into flour to make a batter. Add water if batter seems too thick. Let rest for 30 minutes.

Select a crepe or frying pan (5-or-6-inch diameter), coat with oil and heat. Using a ¼-cup measure pour enough batter into pan to coat surface. Pour excess back.

Cook on 1 side until brown, turn over for 15 seconds or so and turn out crepe or "shell" onto counter. Continue until all crepes have been made, rubbing oil over bottom of pan as needed. (Work goes faster if 2 pans are used; also if one person makes crepes while another adds filling and rolls them.) Place a generous tablespoon of filling on each and fill up into a tube.

Fit tubes with flaps down in one layer in two or three ovenproof platters or casseroles. Cover with tomato sauce and bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes or until sauce is very hot. To freeze, don't cook or put sauce on shells. Place them on cardboard, wrap with waxed paper and foil and store in freezer. Cover with tomato sauce before cooking and allow an extra 10 minutes in the oven.

Egg Dish Fit ForBurgundians

Burgundians are known as hearty eaters. The following recipe, prepared in the kitchens of the Hotel de la Poste in Beaune, is a fine example of why the reputation persists. It can be a luncheon or supper main course, or be offered as the first course at a party dinner.

Unlike most egg dishes, "Burgundy-Style Eggs" isn't a likely choice for breakfast.

BURGUNDY-STYLE EGGS
(Serves 4 or 8)

8 eggs
½ cup white vinegar
For the sauce:
2 ounces butter
1 large onion, sliced
¼ Cup flour
1 bottle red burgundy wine
1 head garlic, cut in half but unpeeled
¼ teaspoon dried thyme
2 bay leaves
5 or 6 sprigs parsley
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
For the garniture:
¼ pound mushrooms, cut in quarters
Juice of ½ lemon
¼ pound slab bacon, cut into ½ by ½ by 1½-inch pieces
16 small onions (pickling onions)
8 slices stale French bread
1 clove garlic
Salt and freshly ground pepper

Poach eggs day before they are to be served, if you wish. Heat non-salted water to a boil with vinegar, then poach eggs until just firm but still runny in centre. Transfer to cold water to stop cooking, trim edges with a knife and refrigerate, covered with cold water.

Melt butter (non-salted is best) in a heavy saucepan. Add onion and cook until translucent, but not brown, sprinkle on flour. Cook and stir over low heat to make flour a cocoa brown. Stir in wine, bring to a boil, then add a cheesecloth bag containing garlic, thyme, bay leaves and parsley, add salt.

Simmer, partially covered, for one hour. Move pan so only one corner is over flame. Remove skin that forms on surface of sauce. Repeat several times. Off heat pour sauce through a sieve. Stir mustard into strained sauce, taste and adjust seasoning as necessary.

Place mushrooms in a small pan with ½ tablespoon of butter, ½ teaspoon of salt, lemon juice and enough water to cover bottom of pan. Bring to a boil covered, cook for two minutes longer, remove from heat and allow mushrooms to cool in juice. (Save juice for use in other sauces or in soups).

Blanch bacon for five minutes in simmering water. Drain and dry. Simmer onions in salted water until tender but still firm. Drain. Rub surface of bread slices with cut garlic clove.

Saute bacon in frying pan with one tablespoon butter until very crisp. Drain but reserve drippings. Saute onions in drippings until they begin to brown. Reserve. Finaly, fry bread in drippings or, if you prefer, in olive oil to brown on both sides.

All of the above steps may be done ahead. To assemble the dish, reheat sauce and have a low pan filled with water simmering for eggs. Place bread croutons on serving plates and warm in oven along with onions, mushrooms and bacon.

Place eggs in water only to heat through. Drain, set on crutons. Spoon hot sauce over eggs and garniture and serve at once.

Sauerkraut Sloppy Joes

JUMPING JOES
(serves 8 to 10)

One 14-oz. or 15-oz. can sauerkraut, drained
¾ c. water
1 foil pkg. sloppy joe seasoning mix
1 lb. wieners
1 pkg. (8 or 12) hot dog buns
4 slices Swiss process cheese (OR any on hand)

Preheat broiler and move rack to lowest position.

In a medium pot combine DRAINED sauerkraut, water and contents of seasoning envelope. Bring to boil and simmer stirring for 2 or 3 minutes. In another pot barely cover wieners with cold water and bring just to boil. Drain and transfer to broiler pan and barely brown. Remove from broiler oven. Spread generous tablespoonsful of hot sauerkraut in crease in buns. Cover with broiled wiener and top with one third of a slice of the cheese. (Cut each slice into 3 strips.) Return to broiler just long enough to melt cheese.

Arrange like the spokes of a wheel on large round serving plate and garnish with green onions and miniature tomatoes or pickles of your choice.

Traffic Limit on Mall

They'll be pulling the "plug" on Government Street Dec. 15, but that doesn't mean the newly-built mall will be opened up as the starting point for unrestricted northbound travel.

Removal of the barricade at the Humboldt-Government-Wharf intersection will permit only one lane of northbound traffic to use Government, city council was informed Tuesday. But only for six blocks as far as Yates.

Traffic division engineer Derek Wild explained that to prevent the street from again becoming an artery between James Bay and the northern suburbs, and island will be installed at Yates to block that point and permit left turns only.

Permitting one lane of through traffic to use the lower section of the street is necessitated by the closure of the northbound lane on Wharf, where work will start Dec. 15 on installing underground services and road reconstruction.

The Wharf project won't be completed until the early summer, and indications are that the lower Government barricade will then be reinstalled to cut off through traffic once more and keep the mall mainly for pedestrians.

Water Bill $15M?

Saanich has a $15 million waterworks problem.

It's going to take an initial injection of $1 million in 1976 and 1977 to tackle the immediate difficulties, the public works committee was told Tuesday night.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said an extensive study carried out by Underwood, McLellan and Associates Ltd. shows the cost needed to provide adequate services for the next 20 years could probably exceed the $15 million figure if the work is spread out over a 10-year period.

Warren said it is urgent that $500,000 be spent this spring in order to meet next summer's demands and eliminate the "precarious situation" presented by low pressure in some areas.

An additional $500,000 will be needed in 1977.

Warren pressed for and received the committee's support that council be advised to put $500,000 for waterworks in its provisional budget. The normal amount spent on this type of work each year is about $165,000.

In order to lighten the load on the southern part of Saanich's water system a new network of water lines is needed to connect with the Greater Victoria Water Board's new 48-inch supply line.

Warren said the first priority is to connect with that line and to increase the pumping capacity of the Rithet reservoir near Broadmead.

The Gordon Head area, alone, uses 5 million gallons of water a day. The Mount Tolmie reservoir has a 1 million gallon capacity, compared to Rithet's 7 million gallons.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said comtroller treasurer Roy Broughton is preparing a report on the best means of financing the 10-year program.

"If the work is carried out over 10 years, it would not be fair to present users to pay for the necessary improvements out of water utility revenue," Warren stated.

Quebec Teachers Off Job

MONTREAL (CP) — In the largest protest to date in their current campaign to improve contract offers, about 10,000 teachers were off the job today in the Montreal area, leaving more than 250,000 students without classes.

"Our action to stop the schools from functioning has been about 99.9 per cent effective," said Henri Agrataud, an official of the 7,300-member Alliance des Professeurs de Montreal, one of three major teacher federations in the province.

"Our colleagues in the other unions have had the same success as well."

The teachers set up picket lines outside many of the 400 schools closed by the protest, and also blocked entrances to the Montreal Catholic School Commission administrative offices

"There may be a couple of teachers and principals who made it into the schools, but that's it," Agrataud said.

The Alliance and other unions are affiliated with the Quebec Teachers Corp. (QTC). One of the QTC unions includes non-teaching personnel such as secretaries and maintenance workers.

UNITED WAY GIFTS SHOWING 20% JUMP

Early United Way campaign returns from provincial government employees indicate there could be a 15 to 20 per dent increase in donations, campaign chairman Eric Dowell said today.

Dowell met Monday with Deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace and representatives of the government employees' fund in an attempt to boost lagging donations.

He said pledge cards have been distributed to every provincial government employee in the Greater Victoria area and that the campaign also anticipates strong support from the B.C. Government Employees' Union.

At the end of last week, the campaign had collected about 48 per cent of this year's objective of $750,000. Campaign officials said updated figures will be available later this week.

Donations to the campaign can be made at any chartered bank in the Greater Victoria area, any United Way agency or the United Way office at 737 Fort.

Murder Plotted By CIA

WASHINGTON (WP) — Shortly after the assassination of Dominican dictator Rafael Trujillo in 1961, the U.S. State Department was urged by its new consul general there to give highest priority to the "complete neutralization" of Gen. Arismendi Trujillo, the slain dictator's troublesome brother.

The word "neutralize," according to informed sources, was a bureaucratic euphemism for "assassinate" and had turned up before in secret government documents concerning the rebel group that killed Rafael Trujillo.

The recommendation involving Arismendi Trujillo was sent directly to the state department and apparently received fairly widespread distribution there.

The episode contrasts with allegations of Sen. Frank Church (Dem.—Idaho), who has more than once likened the CIA to a "rogue elephant" in its assassination scheming, off on a rampage of its own. Church's Senate intelligence committee has been investigating CIA involvement in assassination plots for months and is expected to make its report public this week after a closed-door presentation to the Senate.

The proposal to neutralize Arismendi Trujillo was made to the state department in an early September 1961, telegram from U.S. consul general John Hill in Ciudad Trujillo (now Santo Domingo).

It could not be learned how seriously the recommendation was considered or how high it was carried. Arismendi Trujillo left the Dominican Republic in November 1961, in a showdown with President Jorquin Balaguer that brought U.S. warships close to shore.

The state department also had been informed of the assassination plans of the Dominican dissident group which killed Rafael Trujillo on May 30, 1961, after getting what has been described as a token supply of small arms from the CIA.

Although there is no evidence that the CIA guns were used in Trujillo's assassination, consul general Dearborn has acknowledged that the U.S. government was well aware that the dissidents saw assassination as "the only option" for them. He repeatedly has stated that whatever he did was done "not only with the knowledge but the approval of the State Department."

A few days after Trujillo was killed, Dearborn was replaced by Hill as consul general. Meanwhile, Lt. Gen. Rafael (Ramfis)) Trujillo Jr., the dictator's son, returned to take command of the Dominican armed forces. The island nation remained in turmoil.

One of the biggest problems was Gen. Arismendi Trujillo, Ramfis's uncle, who reigned virtually supreme in the Bonao district with a private army of 6,000 men known as Cocuyos de las Cordilleras (Glowworms of the Mountains).

Consul General Hill, among others, reportedly tried to persuade Arismendi Trujillo to leave the country, but without success.

By early September 1961, sources said, Hill informed the State Department that he felt "highest priority" should be given not only to "removing" Hector Trujillo, another of the late dictator's brothers who had been president (and who, the cable said, was reportedly planning to go to Rome), but also "to neutralizing General Arismendi Trujillo."

Hill told Washington that "his departure or complete neutralization would do much to promote" a more democratic climate and would substantially reduce the possibility of "repeated incidents" in the countryside.

In late October, 1961, the government newspaper El Carbie said Arismendi Trujillo had left the country "for health reasons." Brother Hector left a day later, but the two of them returned unexpectedly in mid-November, triggering fears of a coup.

Acting on information supplied by Hill, Secretary of State Dean Rusk warned publicly that the two brothers might be plotting to seize power. Besides calling the threat to the world's attention, Rusk hinted of possible intervention, saying the Kennedy administration was considering "further measures."

Ramfis quickly resigned as chief of the armed forces and left for Paris aboard his yacht. The elder Trujillos went into exile a day later, while a flotilla of U.S. warships stood offshore in support of President Balaguer.

Forced Methadone Scheme Eyed

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A compulsory methadone treatment program for heroin addicts may be tested in the province next year, the head of the B.C. Alcohol and Drug Commission says.

Peter Stein said in an interview the commission is working out details to initiate a pilot project, probably in the Vancouver area.

The attorney-general's department, particularly the corrections branch, has wanted a compulsory program for some time but the commission has turned aside their requests, he added.

Since the commission was formed three years ago the focus has been on developing a tough, no-nonsense voluntary system, one that was consistent throughout the province, he said.

It has been aimed primarily at the small number of addicts — estimated at between five to 10 per cent of the user population — who are self-motivated to seek help.

"We wanted to set up a system where we'd be giving our best shot to the best risk group," Stein said.

That goal has been largely reached and the commission is considering accepting addicts referred by the courts for treatment.

Compelling a person to take treatment raises a number of moral, medical and legal issues as well as problems, Stein noted.

He felt, however, if a person were involved in socially dangerous behavior, then whatever his habit — alcohol or drugs — it was "entirely appropriate for him to become the object of the criminal justice system for control."

Stein regards methadone only as a stop-gap and not a panacea.

"We do not claim a drug dependency program is superior to an abstinence one. We would prefer the cold turkey approach. But the reason we have accepted methadone as a form of treatment is because after years working with addicts around abstinence it's been an abysmal failure."

He said the use of methadone should be limited to the really committed, long-term, hardened user. Other approaches should be taken to help young addicts, he felt.

One approach that hasn't yet been tried to any extent has been aversion therapy which attempts to give addicts a painful association with drug use.

He said the emphasis on any treatment program is to make the users aware of not only their responsibility in becoming addicts, but also their responsibility in overcoming their habit.

Stein said sooner or later the commission will have to examine the possibility of heroin maintenance as an alternative treatment program.

He noted methadone and heroin were the same drug "pharmacologically speaking."

"There has got to be a pilot project to find out once and for all if it will work in Canada."

But, he said, such a scheme would be thwarted without political support, which is almost non-existent.

He noted in Great Britain methadone and heroin are used interchangably in the treatment of addicts.

But would it work in Canada? Would the dispensing of heroin have the psychological effect of attracting more addicts off the street?

Stein left little room for doubt that be believed if it did, it should be tried here, at least on highly-selective, trial basis.

Nominal Sentence

A former Victoria resident was sentenced Tuesday to a nominal one day in jail and placed on probation for two years for trafficking in heroin in 1973.

Michael Stanley Fraser, now living in Vancouver, was convicted earlier in county court of trafficking one cap of heroin.

Court was told that he has made progress on the methadone program withdrawing from heroin addiction, that he now is gainfully employed and character evidence was introduced in support of this.

Judge Montague Drake said he was concerned with the public interest but if, as indicated, Fraser has got himself out of the situation he was in, "it may well be that this process should continue."

As far as deterrence was concerned, there "are special circumstances which can play their part."

Where rehabilitation is well on its way it would be "an act of gross injustice to deal with the matter strictly on deterrence to others."

Such rehabilitation should be encouraged because that, in the long run, is in the best interest of the public, said Judge Drake.

AUTOMATIC JAIL TERMS

NANAIMO — Shoplifting convictions will result in automatic jail terms from now on, until the rising incidence of the practice is stemmed, Judge Stan Wardill said Tuesday.

Wardill issued his warning as he sentenced Lewis Nickerson, 48, of no fixed address, to 21 days in jail after the man admitted stealing a small quantity of groceries from a supermarket here Monday.

He Quit First

COURTENAY — The deputy sheriff for northern Vancouver Island, John Allen, has resigned because he claims his superiors have been building a case on which to fire him for successfully appealing a demotion order by A. L. Pearson, associate attorney-general.

Allen, 41, had been in charge of the five-man Campbell River sheriff's office.

He said he was to be demoted because he refused to move his home from Comox and commuted 30 miles to work every day.

He fought the demotion order and won.

Pupil Disruption Fear

Students throughout Greater Victoria will face "considerable disruption" if 111 recommendations in a special planning report are adopted, board chairman Bill Ross said Tuesday.

Ross said the report, compiled by head of administration Dr. John Wiens, "leaves many questions unanswered" and trustees will have to dig out supportive and alternative information before deciding on the fate of schools throughout the district.

Wiens urged revamping of school boundaries, closing some schools in areas of declining population and completion of two new schools. His proposals would save $1.2 million by 1978.

"The recommendations seem to have educational merit and the degree of educational sacrifice does not appear to be substantial," said Ross. "But the disruption of students changing schools as recommended is bound to be considerable and trustees will have to wrestle with the decisions."

In a related development, a conference on the philosophy and objectives of Canadian education will be held this weekend with a variety of representatives from different levels of government participating.

Teachers, parents and the general public are invited to the event at the Westwind Motor Hotel, on Goldstream in Langford.

read carefully and rest a little more easily.

We know how important receiving your Family Allowance and Old Age Security cheques can be. Yet we both know with the present postal situation how hard it is to get those cheques through.

However The Department of Supply and Services, with the co-operation of the Post Office, has figured out two solutions. One way or the other, your cheques are on the way.

The ideal solution of course, is the Post Office—with your regular mailman delivering your cheque right to your letter box.

The purpose of the rest of this ad, is to let you know what we'll do if things go wrong.

Temporary Distribution Arrangements. Major network of pick-up points can be activated.

If we can't get your cheques to you by post, frankly, we'll need your help. Pick-up points will be set up in your neighbourhood and newspaper ads will give you explicit details on how to find them and what to do next.

Old Age Security first, Family Allowance second

Because of the unusual situation some of the dates when you usually receive your cheque will be changed. For instance, Old Age Security and other pension cheques should be available at the usual time. November Family Allowance cheques will follow later than usual but will also include the December allowance.

Watch your newspapers carefully for further developments

We need your co-operation and understanding. Due to the exceptional situation neither system is going to be perfect, and there may be individual delays. The important thing is to get the cheques out. And that we are doing.

One way or another, your cheque is on the way.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

With sincere thanks and appreciation to the many friends and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy in the recent loss of our Mother, Nova Nellie Rutledge. Special thanks to Victoria Truth Centre Ladies Club. — Cecil Rutledge and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOLMES — In loving memory of my dear husband, dad and grand-dad and great-granddad Joseph C., who passed away on November 19, 1969. Also in loving memory of Cecil C. who passed away January 13, 1973.
"Life's greatest gift is Remembrance."
—His wife Dorothy, daughter Margaret, and all the family.

JAMIESON—In loving memory of Wayne (Slim) who passed away, Nov. 19, 1971.
Gone is the face we loved so dear
Silent is the voice we loved to hear
Too far away for sight or speech
But not too far for thought to reach —Always remembered by Gus, Vilma, the boys and Mom Syoberg.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

GARDENING

Camellias Good for a Century

Camellias have become well known by name at least to thousands of gardeners in the Victoria area since the late 1940s, yet the culture is still not understood by the casual purchaser who buys one plant.

The lustrous foliage and promising buds which form on even young camellias by November make the plants attractive to impulse buyers. With the few basic needs met, every one should be successfully established and thrive for a hundred years or more.

That camellias are long lived has been well proven in Saanich by two specimens moved from the old municipal hall on West Saanich Road to the new building on Vernon Avenue. The plants were then known to be well over 60 years old, so now they are on their way towards 100 years.

The old camellias were well thinned and pruned when lifted, planted against a wall where sunshine would reach, and in a couple of years they flowered well making a little new growth each year.

Now the overall frame structure of these oldies is about the same as when they were lifted from the original site.

Most small camellias are sold as grown in containers so that even an inexperienced gardener need have no hesitation in believing the plant will grow in the garden at home.

Requirements are similar as for rhododendrons: good drainage; light humusy soil with leafmould; adequate light and space.

Probably the trickiest one is the "adequate" light.

What is "adequate" light for a camellia? Should it be planted in full sun or partial shade, or will it grow where the shade of trees is constant?

Since the varieties are known to differ in their need or tolerance for sunlight, only a general answer can be given unless the varietal name is known. Choose a location where blossoms or advanced buds will not be exposed to early morning sun while the late spring frost is still covering the buds, or blossoms. This is the cause of browning so often noted, although the frost is not noted.

A spot facing south with some dappled shade, or southwest with afternoon dappled shade will suit many varieties. Late flowering kinds can be planted facing east for by late May and early June frosts are unlikely, and the sun will ripen the wood for a good display. This ripening of shrubs for blooming the following year is why they need a certain amount of exposure to direct sunlight.

Don't plant against a white or light colored wall where hot sun will create an intolerable heat for the plant. Reflected heat injures many camellias, rhodos and other broadleaved evergreens.

When planting, an important point is to note the soil mark on the stem and plant no deeper. Prepare the hole with humusy soil, some sand if needed in a heavy soil, then set the camellia rootball on a mound of the prepared soil so that the top of the rootball will be level with the surrounding surface. Deeper planting results in few flowers, bud drop and various other troubles.

Fill in the hole with more of the good soil mixture, and water well to soak rootball and soil.

The only protection needed in winter for varieties likely to be sold locally is from northeast wind and saltwater laden wind from the ocean. But never use a closed plastic cover for protection to any outdoor plant — the temperature underneath will be lower than without, and condensation is likely to freeze the foliage and buds to the plastic resulting in complete loss of those parts.

Camellias and rhododendrons grow better when they form part of a community of shrubs in a garden, not as isolated plants agaisnt a house foundation or one in a grassed area. Add these plants to groups of other shrubs or small trees which will provide the kind of protection needed by these lovely flowering shrubs.

MAGNIFICENT

Is the only way to describe this quality home built by a master craftsman. As you enter the front door examine the hand-carved banisters. Walk into the spacious living room with its gorgeous brick fireplace, or run your hands along the teak cabinets in the kitchen. Go out onto the huge sundeck. Gaze out over the made up of acres and acres of fertile farmland where no one can even build in front of you, then, examine the three loe bedrms. on the main floor. Next comes the downstairs, where a cozy rec room with magnificent rock fireplace and rock faced bar await.. Across the hall is the billiard room with plenty of space to do that pool table justice. Also downstairs is a 4th bedroom, laundry area and workshop. To view all these great features at a price of only $78,000, please call:

WILLS & WONNENBERG REALTY LTD.
1318 Esquimalt Rd. 384-0581

CORDOVA BAY RIDGE
2.49 ACRES
Beautifully treed lot physically subdivided into 2 parts of about 15,000 square feet and 90,000 sq. ft. There is over 300' road frontage on both sides of the road. On hydro and water. From top end of property you can see across the straits over the Gulf Islands and to Mt. Baker. Or you can build at the lower end for complete seclusion. Driveway and turn-around already in. Build on the small lot and keep the large part as a natural park. There may be the slightest chance you could go to the board of variance and try for 2 building permits. But certainly in the future when the "freeze" comes off this area you would have an aideal subdivision potential with over 400' frontage. This is unique site. Owner will accept trades of any sort, including mortgages, cars or boats. Asking $55,900 with a $22,000 agreement assumable at 9½%, interest only 'til Feb., 1977. Will give builder's terms to qualified buyer for the $33,900 equity. Call F. Wills at 384-0581, Wills and Wonnenberg Realty Ltd.

Olympic Drum-Beaters Deny Games Rip-Offs

Interest in the summer Olympics is low in Western Canada and travel officials are touring the West trying to find out why.

"If it is because people felt they were ripped off by room prices in Montreal during Expo in 1967 they should know they will not be ripped off at the Olympic Games next summer," Canaplan Olympic service director Michel Langlois said in Victoria Tuesday.

Room prices will range from $9 to $23 and will be inspected and controlled by government officials. The rooms are in private homes in downtown Montreal. All hotel rooms are already booked but Olympic officials hope to accommodate as many as 200,000 visitors in private homes.

Canaplan is a Crown corporation set up by the CN Railway and affiliated with Air Canada. It puts together package tours of Canada.

For the Olympics, Canaplan is one of six organizations established to handle room accommodation in Montreal. By government order, no homeowner can rent a room next summer without working through one of the six organizations.

Langlois said a Victorian planning to go to the Olympics could arrange transportation and room accommodation through one visit to a local travel agent. The travel agent contacts Canaplan which puts the package together.

All money paid for rooms will be held in trust by Canaplan until after the conclusion of the Olympic Games, when it will be paid out to the homeowner.

"This is to assure that all commitments are fulfilled," Langlois said.

A Montreal homeowner who wishes to participate in the program contacts Canaplan so rooms can be inspected and a rate established. Small single sleeping rooms will rent as low as $9 per day while top-quality double rooms may range up to $23.

Langlois said there will be no hotel accommodation available.

Of the 25,000 hotel rooms in the city, about 15,000 will be needed for teams and Olympic officials. The remaining 10,000 rooms are booked for conventions and business commitments.

To date more than 25,000 rooms in private homes have been approved for renting and the total rises by about 1,000 per week.

It is not known how many visitors will be in Montreal at Olympics time but the estimates range from 100,000 to 200,000 on a daily average between July 17 and Aug. 2.

Canaplan is organizing 7-day and 14-day tours of eastern Canada from Montreal next summer in connection with the Olympics. Short day trips of the Quebec countryside are also being organized.

These excursions will be of particular interest to western Canadians and American visitors, Langlois said.

Canaplan also organizes transportation and room accommodation for the winter Olympics in Innsbruck, Austria, Feb. 4 to Feb. 16.

In all these ventures, Canaplan acts as wholesaler. Canaplan programs can be obtained through any travel agent in all Canadian cities, Langlois said.

More Charges Loom In Duncan Slayings

DUNCAN — RCMP here said today other charges of aiding and abetting may be laid in connection with the slaying of a man and woman in North Cowichan last month.

Twenty-five-year-old Louis Pena of Mill Bay has already been charged with being an accessory to the double murder of James (Barney) Oldfield, 29, and Pamela (Share) Jones, 22, both of 7900 Richards Trail.

Pena, a child care worker, appeared in provincial court Monday and was remanded to Thursday when an application for bail is expected to be made.

An information has been sworn out charging James Rodrigues, 25, a native of Puerto Rico, with two counts of murder punishable by life in prison. Rodriguez left the country shortly after Oldfield and Mrs. Jones disappeared on Oct. 24.

Sgt. Bill Benedek said police were currently investigating the possibility other friends of Rodriguez may have been involved in the bizarre killings.

The badly-decomposed bodies of Oldfield and Mrs. Jones were discovered Sunday morning over an embankment on Mays Road near the North Cowichan municipal dump. Both had been shot.

An inquest into their deaths has been waived, Benedek said.

The head of RCMP criminal investigation for the province, Chief Superintendent Mark Marcus, said police have a "good idea" where Rodriguez is but declined to mention where.

He said Rodriguez flew to the Bahamas in late October and then returned to the U.S., stopping first in Maimi and tfien Seattle.

Marcus said the Canadian department of justice is negotiating with the U.S. authorities for the extradition of Rodriguez if and when police finally manage to apprehend the suspect.

Benedek said Rodriguez immigrated to Canada about four years ago and spent some time in Montreal before arriving in Duncan where he worked as a freelance photographer and chef at the Ali Baba Pizza.

He has been described as a likeable, happy-go-lucky man with a host of freinds and acquaintances on the Island.

Pena, born in New York City of Puerto Rican parentage, was a friend of Rodrigues' as was Oldfield with whom Rodrigues had lived for several months.

Benedek said Pena was married but separated and that his wife now lives in the Los Angeles area. He had been living common-law with a woman in Mill Bay.

Up to the time of his arrest on Sunday Pena was employed as a child care worker at the Cedar Lodge residential centre for neurologically handicapped boys at Cobble Hill.

A womwn whose son attends the centre said Pena appeared to be a sensitive, conscientious employee who displayed infinite patience in working with handicapped boys. His arrest came as a complete shock to those connected with the centre.

According to one report Rodriguez had stayed with Pena for a few days around the time of the couple's disappearance.

Benedek said police have still not been able to locate Mrs. Jones's husband believed to be living in the Toronto area, but have contacted her parents who make their home in Yuma, Arizona.

Hospital Talks Break Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations between British Columbia hospitals and their 12,000 unionized employees have broken down over the federal government's proposed wage guidelines, a Health Labor Relations Association spokesman said Tuesday.

The association wants to bargain within the guidelines, while the hospital employees union insists it is not covered by the pending federal legislation, he said.

An HLRA bulletin sent to all hospitals accuses the union of demanding a total increase in wages and benefits of 94 per cent over two years, resulting in an extra $170-million-a-year in operating costs.

The spokesman said the hospitals workers are seeking a wage increase of 47 per cent, plus a reduction in work week from 40 to 35 hours, a dental plan, increased premium payments and other improved benefits.

"We broke off negotiations," he said Tuesday. "We couldn't get anywhere.

"We asked the union if it was prepared to recognize the guidelines and their negotiators said no way."

Mediator Ed Sims has been appointed to act in the dispute, after the employers requested mediation assistance.

Jack Gerow, union business manager, said both sides have agreed not to comment on the progress of negotiations.

SHRIMP DEALERS WIN BY A NOSE

SEATTLE (UPI) — Seafood experts from China, Chile, India and Indonesia, bringing with them equipment from their own countries, gathered here for training on how to detect rotten shrimp.

The equipment they brought from home was the nose, for what the U.S. Food and Drug Administration calls the organolpetic detection process. Lesser experts call it smelling to see if the shrimp is bad.

The National Canner Association's northwest research laboratory was to conduct the training. The idea was to teach those from other countries how to detect the bad shrimp before it leaves their homeland.

"We believe this will result in significantly improved compliance with Food and Drug Administration import requirements for frozen seafood products," said James Swanson, regional director of the federal office.

Patty Knitting Shawls

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — Patricia Hearst is knitting shawls to pass the time at the San Mateo county jail.

"She's been doing a lot of knitting,'' Sheriff John McDonald said Tuesday. He said Hearst previously spent most of her time reading, watching television or playing cards.

"It's that new easy type of knitting with large yarn," the sheriff said. "She's been knitting shawls and things like that."

Meanwhile, in Cincinnati, one-time murder defendant Joan Little says she believes Hearst will go free, and she hopes Hearst can manoeuvre her way out of court tangles just to "awaken people" to the differing legal treatment for rich and poor persons.

"They didn't change any laws for Joan Little but they're going to for Patty Hearst," Little said Tuesday. "Do you know why? So she can walk free ... She has that type of money."

Little was acquitted this year in a widely publicized North Carolina murder trial that focused attention on the rights of blacks, women and poor persons. She made her comments on Hearst at a news conference prior to a speech at the University of Cincinnati.

LAKELAND, Fla. — Oliver (Georgia Boy) Hurley's funeral was just the way he wanted it.

The 81-year-old dishwasher was buried with $2 in his pocket, a bottle of whisky in his hand and six barmaids as pallbearers.

"He died with a drink in his hand, leaning on a woman and that's the way he always said he wanted to be buried," a friend said after the weekend funeral.

NEW YORK — The Daily News says Martha Mitchell, suffering from a rare form of bone cancer, has been admitted to Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Centre.

Mrs. Mitchell, 57, wife of former attorney-general John Mitchell, checked into the hospital here early Tuesday under the assumed name of Diane Mitchell, the newspaper says.

SMALL WEDDING is planned for 33-inch circus performer Michu and his fiancee Juliana Pimvicaka who towers over him by five inches. Michu welcomed his bride-to-be at New York's Kennedy airport when she arrived this week from her home in Hungary.

CLEVELAND — A Cleveland man has been charged with soliciting for prostitution through use of his citizens band radio which police say the man used to entice truck drivers to have sex.

Police charged Albert Braxton, 32, with offering sex to truck drivers passing through Cleveland. Braxton, whose nickname on the radio was Hollywood Swinger, would cruise a highway in a private car and arrange parties at the convenience of truck drivers.

Police said Braxton was arrested after they overheard one of his conversations and arranged a rendezvous.

NEW YORK — The CBS Evening News says former White House aide John Ehrlichman has turned novelist, but insists that his political thriller of White House intrigue and blackmail is all fiction.

But CBS says the novel, The Company, contains unflattering portraits of a Richard Nixon-like president and an H. R. Haldeman-like chief of staff as well as a CIA director resembling Richard Helms.

Dief, Newman in War of Words

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — A feud started 12 years ago between John Diefenbaker and writer Peter C. Newman, till now a battle on the bookshelves, has boiled over into a boardroom fight that has resulted in the departure of Mr. Newman from the company publishing the Diefenbaker memoirs.

The feud also is continuing in the bookshops with a sales competition between the new Diefenbaker memoirs and a book by Mr. Newman about big businessmen—The Canadian Establishment.

With all eyes focussed on the sales battle, the boardroom struggle went almost unnoticed.

The stage for the book-selling war was set in 1963 when Mr. Newman wrote Renegade in Power, a critical look at Mr. Diefenbaker's years as prime minister.

Latest reports show Mr. Newman ahead in the current bookshelf battle. But supporters of Mr. Diefenbaker are quick to point out that only 40,000 copies of his book were printed on the first run and most stores are sold out. Mr. Newman's book had a first run of 75,000 and copies are generally still in stock.

NEWMAN

Mr. Newman had his book published by McClelland and Stewart in Toronto. At the same time, he was a director of MacMillan and Co., publisher of Mr. Diefenbaker's book. And two weeks ago, he published a somewhat critical review of the Diefenbaker book in Maclean's.

Exactly what happened after that is a boardroom secret, but it was learned Tuesday that Mr. Newman no longer is a director of MacMillan. Company officials, however, refused to confirm the reports.

Mr. Newman, autographing books in Calgary, couldn't be reached for comment.

ONT. SEATBELT LAW

TORONTO (CP) — Mandatory use of seat belts and reduced highway speed limits, are part of an Ontario government move to reduce traffic accidents.

The seat-belt legislation, introduced in the legislature Tuesday, would apply to all persons except infants, those with certain medical problems and persons whose jobs require them to be in and out of their vehicles often.

It would become effective Jan. 1. Date for the new speed limits would be announced as soon as highway signs could be changed.

Under amendments to the Highway Traffic act, maximum speed on freeways would be reduced to 60 from 70 miles an hour and on other highways to 50 from 60 or 55 miles an hour.

Municipalities would be asked to reduce speeds on sections of highways under their control.

CLEAN SWEEP of Trans-Canada Highway in Goldstream Park is made by B.C. highways department loader driven by Al Campbell. Construction foreman for district, Hector Gerow, said emergency operation, in which rocks are tumbled from hillside above by rope-joined crew which is touring trouble spots in province, is being carried out for first time in 20 years on Malahat Drive.

HELLYER FOR TORIES?

AMHERST, N.S. (CP) — Paul Hellyer, a former Liberal cabinet minister, says he might contest the leadership of the federal Progressive Conservative party if "sufficient support" is forthcoming.

"Some people in Ottawa, including a number of MPs, have asked me to reconsider but it really depends on the amount of support," Hellyer said in an interview Tuesday.

"If there were substantial support I would be interested because it's an honor that no one can refuse lightly."

$300M Plan For CanCel Expansion

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The Canadian Cellulose Company revealed plans Tuesday for a $300 million, eight-year expansion program to begin early in 1976.

Meanwhile, Resources Minister Bob Williams said Tuesday the provincial government expects to release a feasibility study for a major forest industry development on the central B.C. coast before the Dec. 11 B.C. election.

He said the development is a result of a study by the Vancouver engineering firm of H. A. Simons (International) Ltd. about the prospects for development at Ocean Falls.

He would provide no further details.

The first stage of the CanCel program is the $85 million conversion of a sulphite mill at Prince Rupert to production of bleached kraft pulp. The company's daily kraft production there is expected to rise from 750 tons to 1,250 tons.

The second stage would be construction of a $205 million bleached kraft mill at Castlegar. The new mill's projected capacity of 750 tons a day would increase Cancel's kraft production in the city to 1,340 tons daily.

According to a company statement, the conversion to kraft production followed studies which indicated markets for sulphite pulp would remain depressed indefinitely.

Cancel, bought by the B.C. government three years ago, has shown a steady improvement in its financial status, Williams said.

In the last fiscal year, CanCel recorded a net profit of $55 million despite losses in its sulphite operations.

Williams announced the Ocean Falls feasibility study while addressing the annual convention of the Association of Professional Economists of B.C.

He said the final feasibility study had been completed after intense study of forest resources on the middle coast. He said the development would have a "favorable rate of return."

He said that the Ocean Falls Corp. was operating at break-even point until the industry-wide strike which shut down its newsprint machines.

Williams also announced that Kootenay Forest Products Ltd. at Nelson was starting on a $5 million expansion to improve its sawmill operations, build a pole plant and expand its forest operations. This firm is losing money.

NEWS BRIEFS

No Hope for Franco

MADRID (UPI) — Doctors appeared to give up all hope Wednesday of saving Generalissimo Francisco Franco from month-long multiple heart attacks, internal bleeding and kidney failure. Death seemed imminent.

Tug Sent to Aid

LONDON (UPI) — The British government has sent the fast ocean-going tug Lloydsman to help defend British trawlers from harassment by Icelandic gunboats.

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — An Aviateca airliner crashed Tuesday in the mountainous northern Guatamala state of Peten, killing 15 of the 22 persons aboard, airline officials said.

Times News Serives

VANCOUVER — A crack has appeared in the solidarity of striking Vancouver postal workers with the circulation of a petition calling for a secret ballot on the last government offer.

Bert Watch, 54, a sorter at the main post office, said his group hopes to have two booths open today where Canadian Union of Postal Workers members can sign the petition, which also asks for a meeting where union and management officials can give their respective sides on the government offer.

"All we are asking for is a fair shake so the membership can make its own decision," sad Watch.

About 70 persons in the 1,400-local membership have signed the petition so far, he said.

Watch said that according to the union constitution if 51 members say they want a special meeting then the executive has to comply with the request.

Frank Walden, CUPW western regional director, said anybody involved in organizing the petition would be suspended from the union with the right of appeal until the strike is over.

He said the dissidents are just sore losers who have already had their say at a recent Vancouver meeting.

Watch said there are a "considerable number" of workers helping circulate the petitions, but would give no numbers. "We feel there is a growing number here who want to go back to work."

Old age security and federal pension cheques will "definitely" be delivered in the Victoria area Thursday, a post office spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the approximately 50,000 cheques have been sorted by the four Canadian Union of Postal Workers members who broke ranks last week and crossed the picket line to return to work.

The Victoria CUPW local has apparently asked the B.C. Federation of Labor to declare the cheques "hot" because they were not sorted by CUPW members in good standing.

A "hot" declaration could prevent members of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada from delivering the cheques.

An LCUC spokesman said in Vancouver Tuesday that if the cheques are sorted the letter carriers are bound by their contract to deliver them. However, he said, a "hot" declaration could make the union reconsider its opinion.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons once again the government has no intention of increasing its pay offer because it would be contrary to the good of the country.

In other developments:

— The Regina CUPW local is considering laying charges against city police officers because they are getting out of hand in aiding dissident workers to return to their jobs, a union officer said Tuesday.

— Edmonton postal workers are not solidly behind a continued mail strike, says one worker who took an unofficial vote at a union meeting Sunday which showed 43 of the 46 persons voting wanted to return to work.

City Socreds Spurn Pollen Name Bawlf, Rendle to Run

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Mayor Peter Pollen was left out in the cold Tuesday night when Victoria Social Credit members chose Ald. Sam Bawlf and insurance executive Ian Rendle as their candidates in the Dec. 11 election.

Pollen said later he still supports the Socreds and has no plans to seek office in any way in the near future.

Pollen ran a low third in a four-man race which included Ald. Bob Ellis.

Incumbent Socred MLA Newell Morrison bowed out before the balloting starting, telling a surprised audience of nearly 1,000 delegates and observors he is a "very private person" who never sought the publicity of public office.

Morrison made his decision six months ago, wrote his resignation speech last week, and assured the crowd "events of the last few days" had not changed his mind.

Pollen joined the Socreds last Saturday and announced his intention to seek the nomination Monday.

Bawlf joined the party Oct. 2 and announced his candidacy 12 days ago while Rendle and Ellis have belonged to the party for 15 years and nine years respectively.

Tory leader Scott Wallace charged Monday that both Pollen and Bawlf had committed themselves to run as Conservative candidates in Victoria. Pollen agreed he had discussed the matter with Wallace but bowed out, while Bawlf denies the charge as "nonsense."

Pollen's nominating speech was well-received by the jampacked crowd at McPherson theatre but there was an obvious feeling of discontent among the delegates at the mayor's late entry into the race.

Morrison said he did not want to get involved in any internal hassles over Pollen. But his intent was clear in his resignation speech when he talked at length about his work over the last three years in organizing the party after the debacle of 1972 when his running mate Waldo Skillings was defeated and the party needed to be rebuilt.

"I have always quietly gone about doing my job and have never sought publicity. I do not believe in building my house by destroying my neighbors.

"And I never sold Chevrolets by knocking Fords (Morrison once sold Chevrolets and Pollen owns a Ford dealership)," he said.

"It is not only important to choose a candidate who can get elected, it is more important that he be a credit to this great party. That he believe in our principals. That he be a builder and a supporter."

Some party officials said privately Pollen would probably win the election as a Socred but his toughest battle would be convincing the delegates at the meeting he should get the nomination over the two long-time members and the popular Bawlf who had built up a large following and campaign organization in a short time.

On the first ballot, Bawlf won 206 votes, Rendle 190, Pollen 79 and Ellis 6. With 50

DEPUTY SHERIFF'S JOKE WAS LETHAL

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A jail inmate who died of a drug overdose, and whose death was ruled accidental, was actually killed by a deputy sheriff who spiked the victim's chili with narcotics on a whim to entertain fellow deputies, it was reported today.

The deputy, according to the Plain Dealer, showed some capsules and tablets to two other deputies and said he planned to "have a little fun with one of those critters (inmates)."

The deputy went to where inmates were eating, returned laughing a few minutes later and told the other deputies to "keep your eyes open for some critter escaping to the moon," according to the paper.

The inmate, Jackie Nichols, 26, died a few days later in hospital.

Ostler Quashes Dual Charge

Impaired driving charges against a city motorist were stayed Tuesday in provincial court when Judge William Ostler decided the man had already been penalized for the offence after pleading guilty to driving with blood alcohol over .08 per cent.

"It offends my sense of justice that the Crown would deliberately pursue a charge meant to punish a defendant twice for the same offence," Ostler said.

Heinz Plantz, 41, of 1872 Penshurst, faced the impaired charge after changing his plea to guilty Oct. 8 on the accompanying charge of driving with blood alcohol over .08.

The dual charges also drew sharp criticism from prosecutor Nick Lang, who referred to the procedure as "a stupid directive they've given us from the attorney-general's — and you can quote me on that."

Both charges arose from the same incident Feb. 25 following a traffic accident at Pear and Shelbourne, where police apprehended Plantz, who registered a breathalizer reading of .27 blood alcohol content.

Accused parties usually plead guilty to impaired, and have the lesser charge stayed, said Lang, but Plantz and defence counsel Mike Hutchison had hoped the Crown would stay the more serious charge.

Lang had decided to pursue both charges and had already started the impaired driving trial, adjourned from Nov. 6.

But Judge Ostler blocked the Crown move Tuesdy by ordering the impaired charge stayed.

Guarantors Eyed For Gun Buyers

TORONTO (CP) — Purchasers of guns will have to be at least 18 years old and have two persons guarantee their competence to own a weapon under proposals for stiffer gun-control legislation to be laid before the House of Commons.

The Toronto Star says it learned of the proposals from sources in the office of Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

Legislation also would require purchasers of guns to answer a series of questions at special licensing centres intended to verify their purpose of owning a weapon, the paper adds in an Ottawa report.

The law now allows any person 16 or older to own a firearm, providing it is not on the restricted list.

The newspaper says the proposed bill will require persons agreeing to co-sign on behalf of the purchaser to guarantee the mental and physical competence of the buyer.

The bill will apply only to newly-purchased weapons, but licensing of all guns is being considered, the newspaper says.

Allmand said last month that the gun law would require licensing of owners rather than registering of weapons and would cover rifles and shotguns as well as pistols.

A licence would also be required for the purchase of ammunition, he said.

Aussie Letter Bombs

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Letter bombs sent to Australia's caretaker prime minister and another conservative leader today brought violence to the country's political crisis.

Federal police found and defused a letter bomb addressed to Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser in Canberra shortly after a letter bomb addressed to the premier of Queensland state went off in a Brisbane mail room and injured two clerks.

Fraser's political manoeuvring resulted in the unprecedented ouster last week of Labor Leader Gough Whitlam as prime minister, and there was speculaton that the bombs were mailed by an embittered Labor party supporter.

Whitlam condemned the violence, saying:

"Decent Australians will have no part in these methods. They are totally foreign to our way of life."

The Australian Postal Commission offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of those responsible.

"The worst has happened," said an editorial in the Sydney Sun. "Violent words can breed violent actions. The political tough talk has to stop. Now."

Officials said the Brisbane letter bomb was addressed to premier Johannes Bjelke-Petersen.

The premier was campaigning in northern Queensland.

The explosion prompted an immediate search of other officials' mail. Police searching through the office of the prime minister's departmental staff in Canberra, near Parliament House, found the letter bomb addressed to Fraser.

In another incident Fraser was the target of eggs and meat pies in Darwin on Tuesday as the country's election campaign heated up

None of the missiles hurled by Labor party supporters hit him.

The usually-placid Fraser was visibly angered by chanting Labor demonstrators demanding: "We want Gough."

"If it's Gough you want, take him out to sea and dump him," he replied.

Social Unrest, Collapse of Controls Seen

VANCOUVER (UPI) — There may be massive social unrest as a result of spiralling inflation in 1976, and wage and price controls will probably not last longer than six months, Canadian economists predicted Tuesday.

Labor economist Emil Bjarnason told the economic outlook conference of the B.C. Association of Professional Economists that the blame for current inflation should be laid on war and armaments expenditures since 1939, rather than on labor demands.

"In that period, world powers spent two trillion dollars on war preparations. In these circumstances, who needs a theory to explain inflation?"

Bjarnason, director of the Trade Union Research Bureau, said Canada's income and price controls would not work because governments "are dealing with the symptoms rather than the disease.

"Controls have been tried elsewhere and they have never worked," he said.

"The labor movement is fully justified in the belief that wage controls will be made to work, but prices not at all.

"In all, for 1976, I expect continued inflation, though partially concealed, and massive social unrest. What is going on now is like trying to prevent an explosion by shutting off the safety valve."

University of British Columbia professor Robert Evans, who also addressed the 500 economists, said Canada's wage and price controls would not be effective without a restructuring of the economy to eliminate waste.

He said the Montreal Olympics was an example of a large expense of real resources, without return.

He also cited government spending, waste of hospital facilities and personnel and protracted strikes as factors holding the economy back.

"We can't afford the luxuries of inefficient, wasted resources. Every time you launch an Olympics you have to reduce the after-taxes income of every Canadian.

"The problem now is to see who will take the rap for waste."

Evans said controls probably will be successful over a short term of six months "but I can't see them staying in force (for the full period) except as a general harrassment to the price process."

Jobless Newcomers Flooding In

Half Annual 7,000 Chasing Work

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A flood of newcomers is putting pressure on the Victoria employment market and creating problems for an economy that is, otherwise quite strong, say local Canada Manpower officials.

The number of people coming to this area has soared to 7,000 a year, up from 2,000 in 1972.

About half these 7,000 are looking for jobs.

The growth rate in jobs is only about 3 per cent, far too low to absorb the influx of those seeking work.

As a result, unemployment stands at around 8,320 in the Greater Victoria area and their chances of finding work before spring are slim.

Many companies have placed a freeze on hiring and in some cases, particularly in the construction and logging industry, there could be some layoffs due to weather conditions over the winter.

Stan Purdy, manager of Canada Manpower for the Victoria district, stressed that the economy of the area is basically strong despite the continuing unemployment rate.

It is the strength of the Victoria economy that is attracting the migration to the city, he said.

Adding to the problem of increased migration to Victoria is the reluctance of others to leave this area.

A larger proportion of young people are looking for work here, instead of going to Vancouver as had been the pattern as recently as five years ago.

Others who normally would have followed jobs to remote areas of the province are staying in town hoping for an opening to develop.

The picture is further complicated by the increasing number of women entering the labor force.

While the local job market is flooded, there are signs of improvement, however faint.

The growth rate in jobs should be maintained at 3 per cent at least over the next 10 months.

Retail sales are higher than last year and stores are beginning to hire in anticipation of the Christmas rush.

Manufacturing and fabricating plants generally report that orders are sufficiently high to prevent any further layoffs in the immediate future.

Real estate sales are about $3 million ahead of the same period last year.

While there are 8,320 unemployed, there are 89,580 working and most of them can expect to stay on the job on a year-round basis.

Purdy said the number of jobs opening up in this area is lower than at the same time last year but it must be remembered that in 1974 the economy was unusually strong, because of the growth in the government sector at that time.

The Victoria Manpower centre was asked to fill only 6,700 jobs from April to September, down 31 per cent of 1974.

Job openings in manufacturing fell 41 per cent, while those in trucking and other transportation jobs fell 59 per cent. Government job openings were reduced 47 per cent as the provincial government's hiring restraint policy went into effect.

The numbers are startling but the decline is down from a height of remarkable vigor a year ago. There remains an underlying strength in the economy with signs of improvements.

"The job market is starting to absorb skilled workers but workers who do not have readily marketable skills will find it harder and it will take longer for them to find jobs," Purdy said.

After the usual winter layoffs the economy is expected to show strength in the spring, although not the type of surge that has been enjoyed during the past three years.

The level of jobs had been fairly constant for many years in Victoria until 1972 with openings developing only when someone retired or moved away. After that, the job openings soared as a result of provincial government hiring and the boom in the forest industry.

In 1975 the job total levelled off once again but at a much higher level than it had been in 1972. Now the job total is increasing at the rate of about 3 per cent annually, compared with a growth rate of from 6 to 8 per cent in the 1972 to 1975 boom period.

Dan Bowes, community information officer for Canada Manpower, said some recent arrivals from the Prairies have talked about returning to Alberta or Saskatchewan where the supply of jobs is higher. Many of them become disillusioned when they can't find work or encounter long strikes. However, there is little evidence that many of them follow up these sentiments by returning to the Prairies.

"The trend is very strong in the other direction. High salaries offered by the provincial government are attracting large numbers of people to this city and very few are moving away," he said.

"This growth is creating some problems for the local economy, which is otherwise quite strong."

Armor Suggested For Tree-Cutter

Twenty-one fir trees along Balmacarra Road are threatened with the axe.

Saanich's public works committee was told Tuesday night the trees must be removed to construct utility services for five new lots on the west side of the road being developed by T. L. Mahn and Associates Ltd.

A spokesman for the developer said the area is heavily treed and this is the minimum number of trees that must be felled to make way for the construction.

The committee, along with municipal engineer Cliff Warren and parks administrator Frank Andrews, will view the site on Thursday.

"Do you have a coat of armor?" Ald. Roy Wootten asked other committee members." If you're going to cut down 21 trees, you're going to need it."

The developer's representative was told if the committee had no objection to the tree-felling, approval would be given the company on Friday.

EYECATCHER for Metchosin Road travellers is new $10 million sand and gravel processing plant which recently went operational. Rated at 1,100 tons per hour, the plant is expected to produce about 3 million tons of specification aggregate per year for its operators, Construction Aggregates Ltd., and this material will mainly be shipped by barge to Victoria and Vancouver. A company official said earlier, after the gravel is extracted the large terraced bowl has potential for a residential subdivision.

'Save Crystal' Plan Rocked By $1M Boost

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Total bill for restoring the old Crystal Garden building as an arboretum and aviary attraction will be about $2.7 million — over $1 million more than was roughly estimated six months ago.

The revised figure is contained in a report delivered to Victoria city council Tuesday by architects Wagg and Hambleton.

But Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the Crystal Garden committee, said today the detailed costs total was more "expected" than alarming.

He did admit, however, that the city's plan to refurbish the 50-year-old buiding now appears more beset with problems than it did a few months ago.

And he hinted that ultimately the Crystal Garden's fate will hinge on the extent of public support that is forthcoming.

"I would say that viewed in the perspective of the current national restraints, and taking into account the Saanich referendum of last Saturday, I would be loath to expend current tax revenue or existing city funds to any large extent on the redevelopment of that building," he said.

"What I am really saying is that unless we can raise the necessary capital through public subscription or other levels of government we can only proceed if we have the sanction of the voters."

Young said in the light of the Saanich referendum (in which three bylaws for sports and community facilities totalling $1.2 million were defeated) it would be "wrongful" of the city not to consult its taxpayers on the Crystal issue.

But he rejected a reporter's suggestion that the city referendum would also go down to defeat.

"There (in Saanich) it was basically a case of choosing between an expensive road program and some luxuries. We don't have that same dilemma in the city of Victoria.

"We're talking about do or die for a gracious old building, and the decision has to be made on that basis. It's really that simple."

The Wagg and Hambleton report will be made public in a few days, and Young wasn't prepared to discuss specific details today.

But he said the $2.7 million figure is based on the assumption that construction would be under way by the summer of 1976.

He also noted that the architect's scheme includes "considerably more layout than we had contemplated." For instance, is a row of retail stores along the Douglas frontage, and landscaping of the forecourt area as a street patio.

Last June council approved the Crystal Garden committee's recommendation that the renovation task be carried out for a capital cost of $1.5 million.

Until now that has been the only published cost provision for the project. But Young said it was the "original figure prior to 1975 inflation."

Doomed Home a Maclure: Expert

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Doubt that a classic Victoria home earmarked for demolition is a Samuel Maclure design was dispelled today by architectural historian Martin Segger.

He was replying to a statement by Park Pacific Apartments Ltd. director Clive M. Piercy, who said no one is sure the building at 821 Burdett actually was designed by Maclure.

Park Pacific, which owns the site and an adjoining empty lot, intends to develop the combined property and has a permit to demolish the house, which was built in 1906 for the H. S. Crotty family.

"I don't really think there's much doubt about it," said Segger. "It fits very well into a series of houses he (Maclure) did in what I call the chalet style."

Maclure, who died in Victoria in 1929, designed 200 homes in the late 19th and early 20th century and had an international reputation. About 150 Maclure houses are known to survive, 80-90 of them in Greater Victoria, Segger said.

Others of the chalet style include the Munn home at 1009 Terrace (1900), the Audain home at 550 Foul Bay (1902) and the Shallcross home at 935 Foul Eay (1907), with others up-island at Somenos near Quamichan Lake, Parksville and Port Alberni.

The Somenos home also was built for the Crottys, Segger said.

Maclure built about half of his designs on the mainland, some as far as Spokane, Idaho and California. At least one was ordered to be built in the U.K. by a member of royalty.

Segger said he had not seen the original drawings for 821 Burdett, but he knows where they are and how to reach the former owner of the building who had it subdivided into apartments in 1940.

But even without having seen the drawings, Segger said architects may readily recognize features of design and construction attributable only to Maclure. It is the last example of his residential design in the central core.

Piercy said Park Pacific is conscious of the historic value of such a building and is prepared to co-operate with people who think it ought to be preserved. Meanwhile, he assured that demolition which had begun will go no further until at least the end of the month when the remaining four tenants will leave.

The city engineer's department has a stop work order on the building in consideration of tenant safety. But an attached garage, an entrance canopy, some interior finishing and hardware have been removed.

"This type of thing concerns us," Piercy said. "We'd like to do what's best for the city. We have a good reputation and we'd like to keep it."

He offered to get an estimate on the cost of moving the house to another site, which had been suggested as a means of preserving the house by the Hallmark Society.

But Piercy also pointed out that in 1973 the city Advisory Planning Commission suggested the property be consolidated with the adjoining Park Pacific property.

It would not be economic to convert the house into a suite of offices, he said. Building codes would require complete replacement of plumbing and wiring, which would necessitate gutting the interior, he added.

Park Pacific is paying for tenant moving costs and helping them find alternative accommodation.

Segger, a member of the city's heritage building advisory committee, agreed with Piercy that there are better Maclure homes to save, but he stressed the environmental and scholarly value of 821 Burdett.

The streetscape in the Law Courts and Christ Church cathedral precinct is important and the house is a visual reference for scholarly purposes.

"Somewhere you have to stop the erosion of the natural vistas for which Victoria is noted," Segger said.

Piercy said Park Pacific has undertaken to donate items of hardware from the house which the provincial museum is interested in acquiring.

SORRY ABOUT THAT

When a consultant undertakes to carry out a specific task for $10,000 he should complete it without asking for additional funds, city aldermen agreed Tuesday.

Consultant Arthur Slipper, who was commissioned under the Neighborhood Improvement Program to advise on the needs for a community centre in Victoria West, had asked for an extra $1,437 which he said was incurred in the preparation of his report.

He explained in a letter that the cost overrun was "largely due to expenses and services in the final stages of the study being higher than expected."

The request was forwarded with a recommendation for approval from planning director Geoff Greenhalgh, but members of the N.I.P. committee objected to the principle involved.

Said Ald. Mike Young: "He took this assignment on the basis it was going to be a $10,000 fee. If he saw it (the costs) going over, he should have approached council or this committee before proceeding any further."

The committee recommended that council turn down Slipper's request.

New Charges To Be Laid Against Clerk

A charge of impaired driving laid against Victoria city clerk Morran Waller last March 28 was dismissed Tuesday minutes after a trial began before Judge Harold Alder in provincial court.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood told the court there had been an error on the information and that no plea had been entered, thus rendering the charge a nullity.

Alder upheld Owen-Flood's motion and quashed the charge.

Waller, of 1813 Lawndale, was charged by Oak Bay police following an incident on Foul Bay Road.

Prosecutor Peter Hull said outside court new charges of impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol level over .08 will be laid.

Airwaves Labor of Love for Prema

When I was writing my recent series on Port Angeles, I bumped into Prema Mullick — in a roundabout sort of way.

I mean, she wasn't there really. But I heard a lot about her and the different kind of program she produces for radio station KONP.

At the time I was chatting with KONP owner George Buck about the close relationship between his city and Victoria. And he said that, yes, his station is still broadcasting the popular summer program Dock Time in which people are interviewed as they are about to board the ferry for Victoria.

And then there was Prema. She, too, helped form a bridge of communication across the Juan de Fuca Strait.

Prema?

It means "love" in the Punjabi language of India.

And later I sat close to a roaring fire in a comfortable home in the Uplands listening to the haunting lilt of the sitar. And I felt the warmth of sharing.

Then the beat changed to the throbbing theme song from the movie "Hare Krishna, Hare Rama" which tells of a girl born in Montreal who goes to live with her hippie friends in Nepal. And the beauty of the music and the pronunciation of the words are far different from the chanting of the shorn gents you may have heard on street corners here.

. . . bridging the strait

It is this music and much more like it, ranging through the pop field to the classic playing of Ravi Shankar, that Prema Mullick shares with the 6,000 to 7,000 East Indians living in Greater Victoria. Her collection of 800 albums including both the old and modern music of India form the basis of her one-hour program broadcast partly in Hindi and partly in Punjabi at 9:30 each Sunday morning. That's on KONP, which is at 1450 on the dial.

Mostly it's an hour of listening music but the program also includes news items from the Victoria Cultural Association of India and Canada, community news and two or three advertisements, which Mrs. Mullick is grateful for.

She records the commercials herself and even sings the jingles for firms like The Traders and Metro Toyota — in Hindi. "See how much car your money can buy . . ."

The program, started just over a year ago, is immensely popular with East Indian people here. Apart from the one film a week shown at the Fox Cinema, it's the only cultural link Indians have with their homeland.

In most Indian homes here on a Sunday morning, says Prema, the people are ready with their tape recorders and they tape the music so they can hear it again and again.

Prema's husband Dr. Bir Mullick, a scientist at Victoria's Pacific Forest Research Centre, who admits he subsidizes the program because of his wife's great love of music, says:

"We are reasonably sure that there isn't an East Indian family in Victoria that doesn't listen to it."

Now the people take it for granted and if Prema takes a holiday she is flooded with phone calls when she gets back. They are worried it has been stopped. But, she says, they don't realize the work, the suffering that lies behind it.

The Mullicks, who have two daughters — Ramita who is 20 and is at UVic and Nita who is 16 and at high school — came from India in 1956. They lived at first in Vancouver, where Bir attended UBC.

Prema's Canadian radio career started when an East Indian who had a travel agency needed someone to write the script for a program for him. And he heard that Mrs. Mullick had worked on a children's program on the All India Radio in Jullander in the Punjab.

Thus began her program on CKLG Vancouver and one year later she started her popular broadcast from KERI Bellingham, which ran for five years.

There was nothing for the East Indians when the Mullicks came to Victoria two years ago. Prema approached the Victoria stations but they weren't very interested. And anyway, she says, their rates were too high.

max low

So she tried Port Angeles and Buck jumped at the chance.

For the first four months, Mrs. Mullick went over on the ferry every Saturday to record the program live. She paid her own fares and hotel expenses. Later it was changed from Saturday night, because it clashed with prime time on television.

Then Mrs. Mullick bought her own equipment — record players, amplifiers, tape recorders, a microphone — and set up her own mini stiduo at home. She even pays $15 a month to B.C. Tel for a broadcast line so she can still record live in an emergency. Although usually the program is done on a Thursday evening and the tape sent by ferry to Port Angeles.

Of course, with the small number of commercials, the program makes no money.

"In fact, I have to put some money out of my pocket to pay Mr. Buck," says Prema.

But she doesn't mind.

And it's a lot of work for Mrs. Mullick, who is also employed at Montreal Trust. What started as an hour and-a-half effort now takes two evenings to prepare and a third evening to record.

But still she doesn't mind.

"To know that what I'm doing is appreciated makes me happy," she says simply.

"At first when we came here from India, the first 10 years we longed to hear our music but there was no outlet," she explains. "To the people of India music means so much. What ever mood you're in you dance and sing.

"Your own language, your own culture . . . is the food of your soul."

New York

A setback to Wall Street's hopes for an immediate resolution of New York City's financial problems pushed the market into a broad decline.

At mid-day, President Ford issued a statement in which he declined to put his support behind the idea of federal help for New York City, although he indicated he might review his position again early next week.

The news was taken as a disappointment in the financial community, where hopes had been building up that the president would change his position, paving the way for agreement between Washington and New York on a plan to avert a financial collapse by the city.

The Dow, down about two points when the White House statement was issued, fell another six in the next hour and a half.

Texaco was the most-active issue on the NYSE, down ¼ to $23. A 130,000-share block traded at that price.

Borroughs, which raised its computer prices by 2.5 to four per cent, fell 3⅜ to $80⅞ in active trading.

Tuesday's report of a jump in housing starts sparked gains in some home-building issues, despite analysts' assertions that the data didn't necessarily signal the start of a strong rebound by the industry.

U.S. Home, which projected an improved earnings showing in the current quarter from the like period last year, was up ¼ to $4⅝. Kaufman and Broad rose ½ to $6¾ and Evans Products ¼ to $4⅞.

Montreal

Prices were generally lower in moderate trading at Montreal.

Southam Press A fell ¼ to $23 Shell Canada ¼ to $15¾, Northern Electric ⅜ to $25½, Imperial Oil A ½ to $23½, Seagram Co. ⅝ to $28⅝ and Alcan Aluminium ⅛ to $21½. Dominion Textile A rose ⅛ to $8½ and Pacific Petroleums ⅛ to $27⅝.

London

Prices at London generally were mixed in quiet trading.

Oil and bank shares drifted lower while gold shares firmed in response to higher prices of gold bullion on world markets.

Canadian issues moved fractionally lower in dull trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 377.8, up 1.1.

NDP's Vickery Runs in Oak Bay

Times News Services

Alderman Gus Boersma of Fernie, says the main reason behind his decision to withdraw Tuesday as Progressive Conservative candidate in Kootenay was a threat that his business would suffer if he ran.

Boersma, a life insurance agent, said he had been told that if he continued his bid for the seat and split the anti-New Democratic Party vote sufficiently to ensure an NDP victory in the riding, "things wouldn't do so well" for his business.

Advice given by close friends has disclosed "concealed threats" from people anxious to have only a Social Credit candidate contest the seat against the NDP, he added.

Boersma said he disagrees with the political gang-up approach being taken in the riding.

Elsewhere on the election front, Premier Barrett told a crowd of about 700 people in Fort St. John Tuesday that the British Columbia Petroleum Corp. is committed to at least 90 wells in the Peace River area and there could be up to 150 drilled by the spring breakup.

This number, Barret said, would be among the highest drilled in any previous year and the winter activity on a family basis could affect 10,000 people. He said 48 rigs now are operating and each rig employs 16 workers directly and between 60 and 80 indirectly.

In Mape Ridge, meanwhile, Social Credit leader Bill Bennett said no agreement with the federal government affecting the future of British Columbia should be signed during the provincial election campaign.

If a Social Credit government is formed after the Dec. 11 election, it would not accept any moves made "in desperation by the NDP to get elected," he warned.

The Social Credit leader predicted an announcement would be made Thursday about a federal-provincial northwest transportation agreement involving B.C. Rail.

The following candidates were nominated Tuesday.

Victoria (2 seats) — Sam Bawlf, Ian Rendle.

LIBERAL

Langley—Ken Mallinson.

PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE

Dewdney — John Green.

The Oak Bay NDP has nominated 37-year-old civil servant Ray Vickery who hopes to win over the 16 per cent of the riding who voted Liberal in the last election.

Vickery admits his party has a "terrible chance" of unseating Tory leader Scott Wallace, but he's optimistic the NDP can do much better than last time.

Nominated Tuesday night, over Bernard Shaw, Vickery said a number of NDP supporters voted for Wallace in the last election to help defeat Social Credit. A good number of these voters, he said, will revert to the NDP.

"But it's presumptious to say we have a chance of winning," said Vickery who works with the correspondence division of the B.C. education department.

A resident of 552 Victoria, Vickery has worked in the party for more than 10 years. He won the nomination at a meeting at the Henderson Park Pavilion attended by 50 voting delegates.

He intends to get a leave of absence from the education department during the campaign.

He will compete with the Socred's Frank Carson, and Dr. Wallace, and a candidate chosen tonight by the Liberals, who is expected to be Lee Jameson, president of the riding's Liberal association.

That meeting is at 8:30 p.m. at Windsor Park Pavilion.

Tonight the Liberal association in Saanich and the Islands will nominate a candidate. Victoria car dealer Edgar Rhomberg has said he will seek the nomination and Col. O. B. Philp, of 10202 MacDonald Park, retired from hte air force, is considering running.

Meeting is at 8 p.m. at Holyrood House.

BCDC Loan To City Firm

Nu-Way Cleaners of Victoria has received a $25,000 loan from the B.C. Development Corp. to expand the industrial garment rental side of its business.

The loan wass announced today by Industrial Development Minister Gary Lauk who said a $50,000 loan would also go to Silva Bay Shipyard Ltd. near Nanaimo and $75,000 to Bradson Machinery Ltd. of Port Coquitlam.

NDP Bares 'Secret Slogan

Canadian Press

The New Democratic Party has unveiled its poster and slogan for the Dec. 11 British Columbia election. Neither mention the party by name.

The slogan, "B.C. has strong leadership. Let's keep it that way," is emblazoned over a photograph showing a laughing Barrett in a navy-blue blazer, about to shake the viewer's hand.

Asked why the party's name does not appear on the poster, party secretary Clifford Scotton first checked to see if that is so, then said:

"Obviously it is a picture of an individual and the theme is of that individual's leadership."

Poll Under Way with Relish

VANCOUVER (CP) — The hamburger poll is back again.

John Dys, a city restaurant operator, is again offering hamburgers named for leaders of British Columbia's four main political parties.

Early results after one day of selling are 47 per cent for the Bennett burger, 37 per cent for the Barrett burger, nine per cent for the Wallace burger and seven per cent for the Gibson burger.

Dys said Tuesday he wasn't putting too much stock in these initial figures since only 200 burgers were sold.

This year, in addition to offering the burgers at his own restaurant, Dys has an arrangement with a chain of 50 steakhouses throughout the province.

With the purchase of a steak or burger, consumers in these outlets will get a ballot to fill in to help Dys "elect a new hamburger for his Vancouver restaurants."

The Barrettburger "features frozen beef . . . "; the Bennett burger still has "a touch of that wacky flavor"; the Gibson burger has "an Ottawa flavor"; and the Wallaceburger is for "lonesome people who don't know if they are hungry or not."

Politicians keep a wary eye on the hamburger poll — it is the only one available because provincial Election Act bans "straw votes" — including straight-forward opinion polls — once an election writ is issued.
